BFA Program

General Critical Studies Requirements

CalArts is committed to providing a course of study, which advances both the practice of the arts, and a broad program of general education designed to enable students to consider aesthetic questions within larger socio-cultural, ethical and political contexts. The emphasis on the close relationship between critical studies and studio practice at CalArts reflects the visionary commitment to inter and cross-disciplinary study on which the Institute was founded.

A CalArts education is based on both artistic and intellectual rigor. To ensure that every undergraduate has the broad knowledge and cultural sophistication needed for successful arts careers in today's world, all candidates for the BFA Degree must complete the Critical Studies Undergraduate Requirements in addition to coursework in their individual programs.

Designed to broaden vision and encourage well-informed, innovative art making, the Critical Studies Undergraduate Requirements help students to develop analytical, writing and research skills, and to learn about a broad range of topics in the humanities, social sciences, sciences, and cultural studies. Many courses directly related to the student's own métier are also included in the Critical Studies curriculum.

Students awarded a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree are expected to have met the following learning goals:

- The ability to think, speak, and write clearly and effectively.
- An informed acquaintance with domains of knowledge beyond the métier such as those in the humanities, cultural studies, natural and social sciences, and other artistic practices.
- Awareness of theories and methodologies from multiple disciplines and an ability to assess the strength of their claims.
- Acquisition of research skills and an awareness of the ethical issues involved in conducting and presenting such research.
- The capacity to incorporate critical thinking skills into one's academic work and creative process.

All BFA candidates are expected to have taken a total of 46 units in Critical Studies by the time of graduation. This amounts to 2-3 courses per semester and represents about 40 percent of each student's overall course load.

For satisfactory progress toward the BFA degree, students should have accumulated the minimum required Critical Studies units for their year level as follows:

Year Level	Minimum CS Units Completed
End of First Year (BFA1-2)	10 units
End of Second Year (BFA2-2)	22 units
End of First Semester, Third Year (BFA3-1)	28 units
End of Second Semester, Third Year (BFA3-2)	34 units
End of First Semester, Fourth Year (BFA4-1)	40 units
End of Second Semester, Fourth Year (BFA4-2)	46 units

Any student failing to meet the above year-level requirements will be placed on Academic Warning. Any student failing to accumulate a minimum of 22 Critical Studies units or whose performance is judged to be consistently unsatisfactory by the end of their second year of residence may be transferred to the Certificate of Fine Arts program (see Institute Policies and Procedures for details).

At the end of his or her 2nd year, Critical Studies' faculty monitors each student's academic performance and provides counseling for the remaining two years.

The Critical Studies Core Curriculum

In the first or second semester of the first year, all students must take Writing Arts—a course that introduces students to key concepts underpinning the relation between Art and society. Only students who come to CalArts with AP English credit or Freshman Composition units from a college or university are exempted from the Writing Arts requirement.

First-year students must also take a one-semester Foundation Course, chosen from a variety of subjects ranging from literature to contemporary politics to the biological sciences. Both Writing Arts and the Foundation Course have an intensive writing workshop component. In addition to these two required, first-year courses, students will take one course each semester from the Critical Studies curriculum array. It is strongly advised that these are chosen from our 200 level courses.

Breadth Requirement

Throughout the remaining three years, students must get at least two units in each of the following Critical Studies categories:

- Humanities
- Social Sciences
- Cultural Studies
- Math and Science
- Métier Studies—courses dealing with the history, theory and criticism of the student's chosen art form (maximum 14 units)
- Other Métier Studies—courses dealing with the history, theory and criticism of an art form other than the student's chosen specialty

The remaining units are elective and drawn from other courses offered by the School of Critical Studies, or can be fulfilled through Advanced Placement credits and liberal arts/general education transfer credits from other accredited colleges and universities. To successfully complete the 46 units, it is expected that after the first year, the student will need to take an average of three Critical Studies courses per semester.

Upper Division and Special Topics Classes

Upper Division courses (400 level) assume students are already familiar with the modes of thought and writing associated with a given subject area. Special Topics courses (500 level) allow students to study a specific theme or set of ideas in greater depth, often from a multi-disciplinary perspective. MFA Special Topics classes (600 level) are also open to BFAs with permission of instructor.

Note: Students may take a maximum of 14 units in Métier Studies. Students may take or transfer foreign language credit at accredited institutions outside CalArts during their period of residence (for elective credit only).

Critical Studies Minor

Students who have completed their Foundation, Writing Arts, and Breadth requirements have the option of obtaining a Minor in Critical Studies in one of the following four categories: Humanities, Social Science, Cultural Studies or Natural Science. Students are required to take 18 units from their designated area of concentration (12 of which must be completed at CalArts). Students are not required to take additional units to obtain the Minor in Critical Studies; rather students would focus existing unit requirements (46 total) in a specific curriculum area. Students who are interested should make arrangements with the Critical Studies office.

Independent Studies

Students who have completed their requirements have the option of working closely with a Critical Studies instructor on a well-defined academic project for elective credit. Typically these will be awarded 1 unit and only in exceptional circumstances will be awarded 2 units. Independent Studies allow for further research and development of themes and ideas students have encountered in Critical Studies courses and/or in their métiers; they are not meant to replace Critical Studies courses. Independent Studies may only be pursued under the supervision of a Critical Studies member of faculty. Independent Studies may comprise no more than 10 units of the total 46 needed to graduate.

To obtain credit for an independent study, the student must fully define his/her project in a written Independent Study proposal, which also includes a schedule of meetings and assignments jointly determined by the student and the instructor. Independent Study proposals can be obtained in the Critical Studies office, and must be returned no later than Wednesday after Class Sign-Up.

Critical Studies Policies Regarding Course Work

If a student is unable to complete the requirements for any CS course by the end of the semester, he or she may ask the instructor for an incomplete in lieu of a grade. At the instructor's discretion, a HP, P or LP grade will be awarded only if missing work, completed to a satisfactory standard, is submitted by the end of the following semester. Otherwise the student will receive a No Credit.

A student will be assigned an "NX" for any CS course after three absences without reasonable excuse.

Residency Requirement

Effective Fall 2007, students with previous bachelors degrees and students transferring in undergraduate credits are required to complete at least 12 CalArts Critical Studies units in order to obtain a BFA degree from CalArts. While all students graduating will have to meet the breadth requirement, students transferring in from outside institutions may apply transfer credits to any of the corresponding Critical Studies categories up to a maximum of 34 units. The remaining 12 units (Residency Requirement) which must be taken in Critical Studies at CalArts may fall in the following distribution:

- 2 units in Metier Studies
- 2 units in Other Metier Studies
- 8 units in any combination of Creative Writing, Computing and Research Skills, Humanities, Cultural Studies, Social Sciences, Math & Sciences providing the student will have met the breadth requirement by graduation.

Institute-wide MFA Offerings

Critical Studies also offers Upper Level and Special Topics classes (400 and 500 level), which are open to all MFA students throughout the Institute, and to upper level BFAs by permission of instructor. These classes give insight into contemporary criticism and arts practice, with graduate-level readings and assignments. Some Core MFA Writing courses (600 level) may be available to highly qualified BFA and MFA students from other programs by strict permission of the instructor.

MFA Writing Program

The 2-year School of Critical Studies MFA Writing Program offers three options for study: the Writing Program-the choice of most students; Interschool Writing; and Integrated Media (IM). Genre experimentation and emphasis on critical contexts characterize each of these options. The Program is deliberately small, and students are encouraged to work closely with a mentor.

The goal of the MFA Writing Program is to encourage students to find their own aesthetic, even as they become knowledgeable about prevailing aesthetic and critical traditions. MFA Writing Program students will:

- develop a writing practice that allows them to produce work to the best of their creative and analytical potential
- become fluent in a vocabulary that encourages communication and understanding of their own practice as well as the work of their peers
- prepare to become practitioners in a career that may include teaching through training in critical thinking and pedagogy
- produce a thesis that accurately reflects their capacities as writers and that embodies the breadth of their aesthetic stance
- become good citizens of the workshop/seminar and learn to function within a community of artists; understand the value of that community while following their own compass as writers
- develop a sustainable writing dynamic as they enter a world of increasing artistic risk and diversity

Moving away from established models of both "fine writing" and "academic writing," the Program does not draw hard distinctions between "creative" and "critical" modes. All students attend closely to questions of form and aesthetics, as well as to the historical and critical contexts of literary work. Many classes provide a mixture of discussions and presentations on both given texts and student-generated work. In addition to the more traditional forms of lyric poetry, short story, essay, memoir, novel, literary theory and reviewing, many courses cover mixed forms, such as prose poetry, micro-fiction, and hybrid writing that blurs the boundaries between memoir and fiction, fiction and criticism, criticism and poetic experimentation. Whilst not all classes are offered every year, over the 2-year program all students take a wide selection of courses, and we encourage all to experiment with new forms and themes.

The Writing Program has been designed for candidates keen to develop their confidence and range as writers and to benefit from CalArts' uniquely eclectic, experimental atmosphere. The Program is also attractive to students who seek a challenging critical alternative to existing creative and technical writing programs.

To be awarded a Master of Fine Arts degree in the Writing Program, students are required to:

1. Maintain two years of residence (minimum). The residence requirement may be extended for students specializing in writing for mixed media or interactive media formats depending on technical skills and in some cases for Interschool Writing students.
2. Complete a minimum of 37 semester units (see chart below for minimum requirements). To ensure graduation in a timely manner, students are expected to complete at least 9 units per semester.

3. All students are required to take Core MFA courses as well as attend the Thursday night Visiting Artists Series each semester. Students are also free to take upper level/Special Topics Critical Studies offerings and/or institute wide electives.
4. The Visiting Artists Series is a required class for everyone in the program, for which students receive 1 unit of credit in the Fall and 2 units in the Spring. Visiting Artists also functions as a forum for MFA-2s who wish to present their theses in the Spring. The schedule for thesis readings is composed in early Spring.
5. Textual Strategies is required in the Fall for all incoming MFA-1 students.
6. The Thesis Workshop is recommended for all 2nd year students in the fall semester, but not required. To ensure that all students receive sufficient feedback, Thesis Workshops may be limited to 8 students each.
7. The Graduate Teaching Practicum is required in the Spring semester of all 1st year students who desire a 2nd year Teaching Assistantship. Successful completion of this course is prerequisite to an Assistantship.
8. Mentoring: Mentors and mentees meet a minimum of three times per semester for advise-ment and a fourth time to conduct mid-residency and/or graduation reviews.
9. Mid-Residency and Graduation Reviews: Mentors conduct all mid-residency and graduation reviews.

MFA Interschool Writing

Interschool Writing students enroll in both Critical Studies and in an MFA program offered by another school of the Institute-Art, Dance, Film/Video, Music or Theater. Applicants must apply separately to each school. Requirements for the other métiers are set on an individual basis or according to that school's requirements. The following list refers only to the Critical Studies component of the Interschool degree.

To receive the MFA degree in Interschool Writing, students are required to:

1. Maintain two years of residence (minimum).
The residence requirement may be extended for students specializing in writing for mixed media or interactive media formats depending on technical skills. It may also be extended for students whose Interschool requirements exceed a two-year residence (for example, the School of Film/Video).
2. Complete the same requirements as for the MFA Writing Program, except as noted in the chart of minimum requirements given below.

MFA Writing Program, Integrated Media

Students who choose Integrated Media (IM) are enrolled as, and must complete the same requirements as the MFA Writing Program except as noted in the following chart of minimum requirements. Additional requirements-including IM seminars and critiques, specified Critical Studies courses, and electives from throughout the Institute-are set on an individual basis in consultation with the Office of Integrated Media.

MFA Writing Program, Minimum Requirements (37 Credits)

To maintain financial aid eligibility, students are required to take a minimum of 9 units per semester; they are not encouraged to take more than 12.

MA in Aesthetics and Politics

Learning Goals for the MA Program in Politics and Aesthetics

Students graduating from the MA Program in Aesthetics and Politics are expected to

- Have read widely and deeply in the literature on modern and contemporary political, critical and aesthetic theory;
- Be able to articulate the complex relationship between political and aesthetic problems, theories and movements;
- Write critically and at a scholarly level for a variety of publications and audiences; and
- Begin to engage in dialogue with the world beyond CalArts.

This program embraces a multi-perspectival approach to the various intersection between the realms of the aesthetic and the political. First, the MA focuses on what is normally understood as political art – i.e. art-making that chooses to become critical discourse in the public sphere. Second, the program addresses the reverse phenomenon – the famous “aestheticization of politics” that so troubled critical theorists during the twentieth century and that continues to invite further reflection. Finally, the program aims to become a pole of attraction for students, artists, and scholars interested in the type of theorizing – characteristic of continental thought – that contextualizes aesthetic and political phenomena within a dynamic space in which social meanings are generated, renewed and contested. Applicants interested in these fascinating crossroads and increasingly burgeoning fields of study will have the unique opportunity of enjoying the artistic environment and interdisciplinary dialogue offered by CalArts.

The MA is a one-year, full-time year program of study. It will be of particular interest to artists seeking to deepen the theoretical and political elements of their art, and to BA/BFA/MFA graduates who may be considering combining their artistic practice with a scholarly career.

Core courses in the MA in Aesthetics and Politics are taught by distinguished faculty from the School of Critical Studies; students may also take electives taught by faculty from the Schools of Art, Dance, Film/Video, Music and Theater.

MA Aesthetics and Politics Curriculum

(30 credits required for the completion of the degree).

- 12 Core Course Credits
- 12 Elective Credits
- 6 Aesthetics and Politics Lecture Series' Credits
- Thesis

Core Courses:

1. Contemporary Political Thought
 2. Critical Discourse in the Arts
 3. Contemporary Aesthetic Theory
- Thesis Workshop

Aesthetics and Politics Lecture Series

Students will attend monthly lectures by prominent critics and theorists; these will take place at CalArts and at the Roy and Edna Disney/CalArts Theater (REDCAT) in downtown Los Angeles – CalArts' theater and gallery space located in the Walt Disney Concert Hall complex.

Thesis

The MA thesis generally takes the form of a traditional 15,000-word/50 page scholarly work that develops, through a sequence of three to four short chapters (in addition to an introduction and conclusion), an original argument in the field of aesthetics and politics. With permission of the MA thesis seminar instructor as well as the thesis' first reader, students may be allowed to experiment with this form, but in this case the thesis will need to develop a rationale for such experimentation.

The thesis is due by September 1, 2011 for students enrolling in Fall 2010. If a student does not complete the thesis by this date, he/she will have to pay a $500.00 fee per semester to maintain status as a candidate for graduation (up to a maximum of two semesters.) Students who do not complete their theses by September 1, 2012 will no longer be eligible to graduate and will have to re-apply to the Aesthetics and Politics program.

If a student does not complete the required coursework within the academic year of his/her enrollment, he/she will need to enroll the following year to complete the remaining courses on a fee-per-credit basis. If the thesis is also outstanding, the policy stated above will also apply.

Critical Studies Course Offerings

Foundation Courses – BFA1 only

CSCS151 Sacred & Secular Art of South Asia

3 units / Semester I

The Indian sub-continent is the source for multi-cultural civilizations that have lasted and evolved for several thousand years. This course attempts to introduce the full range of artistic production in India in relation to the multiple strands of Hindu, Buddhist, Jain, Sikh, Islamic, colonial and post-colonial traditions that have made its art and architecture so rich, complex and diverse. We will focus on the unique place of images and idols in the context of religions in India, and the notion of ‘darshan’ in Indian visual culture and religion and its relationship to the ‘gaze.’ We will examine the meaning of the word ‘art’ in the South Asian cultural milieu, the relationship between art and the subcontinent’s religious and secular traditions, the status of artists and the impact of trade and travel on artistic development and cross cultural exchange. Lectures and readings provide a contextual framework for understanding the material. Class discussions and assignments are intended to encourage students to bring their own ways of looking at this art, to read critically in light of what they see, and to consider new approaches to the material. Class will visit LACMA to view the South Asian art collection and also take field tripsto the local Hindu and Buddhist temples in LA.

- Foundation credit in Cultural Studies.

CSCS154 Doubles, in Art and Culture

3 units / Semester I

This course will be an exploration of the various permutations and manifestations of doubles and how they inform the production and reception of cultural phenomena. Students will investigate doubles and doubling through the following general groupings: constructed objects (e.g., masks, dolls, mannequins, mirrors, robots); biological occurrences (e.g., twins, clones, surrogacy); psychological tropes (e.g., compulsion, obsession, projection, shadow); rhetorical/literary practices (e.g., repetition, documentation, translation); representational practices (e.g., stereotypes, appropriation,); performative practices (e.g., gossip, recitation, passing, mimicry, parody); cultural performance (e.g., historical re-enactments/simulations, virtual reality, tricksters); perception (e.g., memory, de ja vu, ghosts and ghosting, palimpsests). We will explore how a handful of different cultures accrue diverse meanings to the occurrence of doubling. As required readings will cover only a mere fraction of the relevant literature on doubles in art and culture, each student will conduct research into one aspect not covered in the syllabus and present it to the entire class. Students are encouraged to investigate how doubling functions within their medium conceptually, as a particular methodology, or in specific productions/case studies. Readings will include works of Baudrillard, Gertrude Stein, Patricia Spacks, Dostoevsky, Freud, Sander Gilman, Maria Sabina, Ellen Basso, Barthes, and Elizabeth Stewart. Films include The Golem, The Cradle Will Rock, Magic, Student of Prague, Cabinet of Dr. Caligari, and The Double Life of Veronique (either in-class showings or possible student presentations).

- Foundation credit in Cultural Studies.

CSHM131 Wet, Black Ink: Contemporary Black Poetry

3 units / Semester II

Part survey, part investigation, participants in this course will analyze the poetics at work in published poetry from the late 20th century 'til the day before yesterday. Through our discussions, we'll address aesthetics as well as the socio-cultural environments and events in which we frame these works. We will also read some manifestoes, interviews, peek in on groups like The Black Took and the Dark Room Collective and observe how cultural icons maneuver and morph through the tradition. Readings will emphasize contrasting styles and range—from the serious play of Harryette Mullen, to the austerity of Carl Phillips; the aural lope of Carl Hancock Rux to the typographic constructions of Deborah Richards; the reverent formalism of Lenard D. Moore to the Po-Mo Funk of Duriel Harris; along with several selections from the fringes to the center. Through this class, participants will be exposed to the diversity within what is often seen as a monolithic group and enjoy close reading of some exciting approaches to literary art.

- BFA 1s only
- Foundation credit in Humanities.

CSHM132 Introduction to Postmodernism

3 units / Semester I

This course serves as an introduction to some of the major issues and debates in postmodern theory and arts practice over the past thirty years. It is organized around key concepts for understanding and critiquing the conditions of postmodern life, such as surveillance, simulation, scripted space, cyborg subjectivity and semiotics. Our starting point will be contemporary society and culture—you do not need a background in theory or previous familiarity with the terms 'modern' and 'postmodern' to take this course.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Humanities.

CSHM135 Contemporary Literature

3 units / Semester I

The course focuses on reading and analysis of contemporary fiction with an emphasis on authors who represent significant new approaches in current writing. We will consider how contemporary writing expresses cultural criticism as well as challenges aesthetic traditions; analyzing, for example, works that combine the historical with the fictional, redefine narrative structure, or introduce new styles such as magic realism. Readings will include works by such authors as Toni Morrison, Raymond Carver, Thomas Pynchon, and Don DeLillo.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Humanities.

CSHM136 Lady Murderesses: Introduction to Feminisms

3 units / Semester I

Women have long been known as the 'fairer' sex, sweeter in both looks and behavior. But when they 'cross the line' and become violent, the whole discourse on gender starts to morph, revealing vast reservoirs of latent fear about women's destructive impulses. The relations between genders, and even their definitions, are not fixed and universal, but change over time and place. This course examines contemporary gender configurations and how they impact the lives of both women who commit violence, and those who have violence done to them. The course is based around case studies— from women who have killed their husbands and children in domestic situations, to female combatants in various armed conflicts throughout history. We also look at how representations of gender in film, literature, and the news media help form and consolidate views about female violence and the treatment of women embroiled in it.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Humanities.

CSHM138 Generation X

3 units / Semester II

'Generation X' is a term used to refer to the generation that was born after the post-WW II baby boom, roughly between the mid 1960s and the late 1970s. The term has also been used, however, to refer to works produced by artists born in this period who share a particular outlook on life. Rather than determining this outlook in advance, this course sets out from Douglas Coupland's landmark novel Generation X to explore the aesthetics, ethics, and politics of a number of 'Generation X' works in literature and film. Ranging from 1991—the year when Coupland's novel was published—to the present, the course will move from 'Generation X' into the generation that came after it (sometimes referred to as 'Generation Y' or 'Generation Next'), to ask whether the September 11 terror attacks and other recent events may have marked the end of 'Generation X'. What aesthetics, ethics, and politics might have come in its place? Some of the themes to be addressed are: schizophrenia and capitalism; multiculturalism; the nuclear family; high school massacres; sex, gender, and sexuality; hurricane Katrina; Guantánamo Bay. Novels to be considered are: Chuck Palahniuk's Fight Club; A.M. Homes' Music for Torching; Jeffrey Eugenides' Middlesex; and Dave Eggers' Zeitoun. Novels will be paired with films such as: Spike Lee's 25th Hour; Gus van Sant's Elephant; Sophia Coppola's The Virgin Suicides; and Michael Winterbottom's The Road to Guantánamo.

- Foundation credit in Humanities
- BFA 1s only.

CSHM139 Introduction to Television Theory: The Cinema of Television

3 units / Semester II

One way of gathering our already vast understanding of television into a set of assumptions, uses, and recommendations—into a 'theory'—is to study how another medium like the movies portrays television. Whereas cinema achieved cultural and aesthetic primacy out of a struggle that often questioned cinema's own legitimacy, its hostility toward television's challenge is curious. Even as the two mediums converge in production, reception, and technology, tensions persist, though television rarely demonizes cinema. What is television's perceived threat? What are the larger discourses of modernity and post-modernity we might be able to locate in the cinematic representation of television? How can this study give us a greater understanding of our own participation in mass culture? Through directed readings in television criticism, and through selected screenings of films about television, this course will seek an articulate understanding of a medium we all too often take for granted.

REQUIRED TEXTBOOK: (by the first week of class) Television at the Movies: Cinematic and Critical Responses to American Broadcasting. By Jon Wagner and Tracy Biga MacLean. Continuum Books, New York, 2008 (paper).

CSSM162 Heredity, Race, Intelligence & Evolution

3 units / Semester II

People perceive themselves as of different 'races'. In every generation someone tries to prove that one or another 'race' is superior or inferior to the rest. This course will explore the history and nature of these perceived differences, the scientific evidence related to 'race', culture, ethnicity, and human evolution. The class will write, design and assemble a book for the general public, which will be intended to demolish racial myths and illuminate the common human condition based on science and logic.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Science and Math.

CSSM169 Conservation and the Environment

3 units / Semester I

This course considers the current state of the Earth from an environmental perspective. We will look at the causes, consequences and possible cures of various environmental stresses to ecosystems. We start by looking at human population growth. How can we understand and possibly alter a pattern of population growth that is seemingly out of control? We then turn to the consequences of humanity's use of habitat and resources. Human activity has been linked to symptoms of environmental stress including the rapid loss of biodiversity and global warming. Many solutions to halt or reverse environmental damage have been hypothesized. These range from the enactment of laws, creating economic incentives, the development of new technologies and even tapping into emotional ties to nature. We will critically evaluate the science behind, and when possible the success of, these hypothesized solutions.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Science & Math.

CSSS142 Dreaming as Unconscious Thinking and Thinking as Conscious Dreaming

3 units / Semester II

The unconscious has been explored in a variety of ways throughout history in mythology, the arts, shamanistic traditions, philosophy, psychoanalysis, and most recently in cognitive science. This course will cover some of the major theories of the unconscious historically and will focus on dream interpretation, the logic of the unconscious and the creative imagination as nodal points and keys for our investigation.

- BFA 1s only.
- Foundation credit in Social Science.

CSSS145 Latin American Mega-Cities

3 units / Semester II

In recent years there has been an astounding increase in urban populations in Latin America, with Mexico City and Sao Paulo numbering more than twenty million apiece. What has caused this rapid shift to urban living, and what impact has this had on the countries of the region? As manufacturing has left the center city, replaced by the advanced service sector linked to global processes, how has the life of these cities changed? Most of the cities of the South, including Latin America, have been experiencing a dualization, where the gap in income between rich and poor has continued to grow, reconfiguring the city in crucial ways. Beginning with a brief overview of the history of the city in the region, including the Aztecs and Mayans, this course will use a broad spectrum of analysts to examine the profound shifts taking place in the major cities of Latin America, with a focus on Mexico City, Buenos Aires, Sao Paulo, and Havana. Finally, how has the city been a source of creative production by the artists of the region, both historically and at this moment in time?

- Foundation credit in Social Science.
- BFA 1s only.

Critical Intellectual Skills

(Computing and Research Skills, Languages, and Creative Writing)

Critical Thinking and Essay Writing Skills

CSCI110 Writing Arts: 20th C. Art & Society

3 units / Semester I, II

This course is an introduction to critical thinking and essay writing. The Tuesday lectures provide students with information about a selection of art and literature movements of the 20th century; the Wednesday sections provide opportunity for discussion, as well as hands-on help with the writing process. In lecture, our focus will be two-fold: first, we will become familiar, via visual sources (slides, film clips, etc.) and spoken lecture, with the aesthetic range of performing, visual, and literary arts related to the nine movements covered in the course; second, we will explore the various relationships—be they fantasized, theorized, or actualized—between these aesthetics and the historical moments from which they emanated. Many or most avant-garde movements—from Futurism to Surrealism to Black Arts—have aspired to change society or conjoin art and life in some way or another; this class will examine how this impulse has played out over the past century, and ask students to think about how it might play out in the present and future. Readings will include exemplary manifestos and classics from the various movements, as well as short critical essays to provide historical and/or aesthetic background. By the end of the semester, students will ideally have gained an understanding of several critical issues in aesthetics and recent art history, as well as the building blocks they need to become more confident and capable writers both in their time at CalArts, and beyond.

Instruction takes place in large group presentations in the Bijou on Tuesday (4:00-5:00), followed on Wednesday by a two-hour discussion section/writing workshop (10:00-12:00).

- Required for all BFA1s.
- Foundation credit in Critical/Intellectual Skills.

Computing and Research Skills

AG111A Macintosh for Designers

3 units / Semester I

See description in the School of Art section.

AR111A-D Macintosh for Artists

3 units / Semester I

See description in the School of Art section.

CS217 Digital Media and Web Development for Musicians

2 units / Semester I

This course provides an introduction to digital media and web development for musicians. Each student will learn basic HTML and how to use it to build custom websites for designing artist homepages. Students will learn how to stream music, stream video, and manage media online. Each student will also learn how to use social networking sites to help gain fan bases and friends using websites like myspace and facebook. Final project in this course is to have a personal website set up and running.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS268 The Reproduction of Sound

2 units / Semester II

A moderately technical introduction to the science of acoustics and audio systems technology. Covers the nature, measurement and behavior of sound; audio terminology, signal flow, and recording performance specs; digital audio; microphone types and usage; and an overview of recording theory. Lecture/demonstration course, not hands-on recording.

- Prerequisites: Solid math skills, including algebra.
- Permission of instructor required.

CS313 Introduction to Object-Oriented Musical Programming

2 units / Semester I

This course provides an introduction to object-oriented computer music programming languages and how students can use them to make custom software for unique musical expression. Chuck, a strongly-timed computer music language will be introduced. An overview of general programming concepts including types, arrays, control structures, classes and objects will be presented. How to use Chuck for programming real-time systems incorporating MIDI devices will also be described. Each student will present a final project which demonstrates how chuck can be used in writing synthesis, analysis, or interactive performance tools for a live performance or short composition.

CS316A&B Flash Web Design

3 units / Semester I, II

Flash animation and web design techniques, as well as the study of digital media online.

Required for 3rd year Character Animation students Semester I required for Section 1; Semester II required for Section 2

- Permission of instructor required for non-Character Animation students

CS319B Surfing the Web: Theorizing Art and Animation on the Internet

2 units / Semester II

Exploration of convergence between art, animation, technology and the Internet.

Investigation of artistic work online, discussion of digital tools and their influence on creative expression, and examination of theories surrounding the word wide web, cyberculture, and the digital sphere.

CSCR216 The Sweet Fruit of Cybernetics: How 1940s Technology Helps You Get a Date

2 units / Semester I

Today's hottest technologies are descendants of Cybernetics: 1940s defense research into neurology, electronic networks, and logical models. Since its inception, Cybernetics has split into diverse camps from Esalen to the Rand Corporation. Today it provides the foundation for many popular and disruptive technologies. These systems foster the formation of like minded communities, reverse the economics of scarcity, and make global mindshare available to individuals. We will consider the benefits and risks of social networks, giving special attention to their nascent defense ideologies.

Languages for the InstituteCS005A&B Supplemental English for Artists

1 unit / Semester I, II

This course provides opportunities for non-native English speakers to gain skill and confidence in using English effectively. Emphasis will be given to building vocabulary necessary for critical thinking and discussion within the artistic disciplines. Close readings of current articles in contemporary arts publications, and other sources will be utilized for vocabulary building, comprehension and critical discussion. Class activities will develop skills in listening, speaking, reading and writing. In addition to attention paid to grammar and sentence structure, this course will address issues of literal and metaphoric meaning and the implications for comprehension and effective word choice.

Creative WritingCSCW221 Slipstream - Experimental Science Fiction

2 units / Semester I

This creative writing class familiarizes students with the art of making the strange familiar or the familiar strange. Students are introduced to genre works, ranging from pre-cyberpunk SF to the present practice of 'slipstream'. Both experimental and traditional story-telling techniques are reviewed with a special emphasis on prose style and hybrid narrative forms. Projects include the short story, short scene, and the film treatment, and are peer reviewed in a workshop format. Sub-genres include space and colonization, cyborgs, future cities and women and science fiction. Materials for study range from the renowned works of Samuel Delany, Philip K. Dick, Cordwainer Smith, James Tiptree, Jr., to the current works of M. Rickert, China Miéville and Charles Stross. Readings are supplemented with film and guest lecturers.

CSCW301 Chaos and Old Night: Artists as Writers

2 units / Semester I

'the maker of a sentence launches out into the infinite and builds a road into chaos and old night, and is followed by those who hear him with something of wild, creative delight.' ralph waldo emerson reminds us in the preceding quotation that while the task of articulating one's thoughts is not always easy, it can be both ecstatic and effective for artists in a variety of ways. This creative writing class is a lecture/workshop investigating artists as writers. students are introduced to the writing of a variety of artists and are supported on a journey examining their own texts, their generative impulse with regard to writing; student writing will be considered as complement/formal addition to, discursive of or totally discrete from simultaneous practice in metier. classes will consist of weekly discussion/ presentation re: readings, in-class writing exercises, sharing and workshoping of projects, screening of slides and video.

CSCW325 Graphic Texts: Looking at Text and Image Combined

2 units / Semester II

If every picture tells a story, and if all writing is visual, what kinds of truth can we conjure when we combine images with text and when we blur distinctions? This class will study various kinds of graphic texts in which visual design and illustration do as much work to perform the narrative as the words do. We will look beyond traditional text on the page format and emphasize visual aspects of literary creations. For example, topics will include: text as image and concrete poetry, comics and graphic novels, artist books, digital literature and hypertexts, photo-texts and video poems, advertisements and commercial design, typography, rebus stories, alphabets and secret codes, illuminated manuscripts, political posters and word-based paintings, literary illustrations and sound art. While looking at modes of reading interactive image/word meaning-systems, students will do creative writing exercises; critically look at concepts and methodologies, and puzzle-over creative and theoretical works.

CSCW407 The Liars Club: Memoir, Memory & (Mis)representation

2 units / Semester I

This is a creative writing class informed by critical theory and cultural studies texts on identity and subjectivity. The course considers memoir as both a literary genre and cultural phenomenon, and investigates the performance of constructed, fabricated or 'natural' identity, public valorization of authentic experience, and the problematics of memory. Each of the primary texts raises these issues from a distinct perspective: a white man's candid account of briefly living as a Black man in the segregated Deep South; a Swiss Christian's fictitious rendering of a childhood lived in a Holocaust concentration camp; an addict's wildly hyperbolic story of recovery and redemption; and a psychotherapist-in-training's attempts to restore, and come to terms with, her fractured memories of childhood trauma. Through the course readings, assignments, dynamic in-class discussion and weekly writing exercises, students will be invited to wrestle with questions about the ethics of identity appropriation, the limits of creative license, and the ways in which our seemingly insatiable cultural appetite for stories of extremity, excess and trauma help to create an environment that encourages authors to misrepresent their identity or experience.

CSCW410 I Wrote This for You: A Poetry Writing Class

2 units / Semester II

This is a poetry writing class that will focus on the use of direct address—on what it means to say 'you' in a poem. The lyric poem, particularly when it employs direct address, can be seen as the staging of a private discourse for an 'eavesdropper': the reader. That is to say that the lyric poem is, in a sense, always 'overheard' and that this seems especially so when its performance is explicitly addressed to a 'you.' This scenario is complicated by a tendency in the reader, because of the interpellative nature of direct address, to identify somewhat, but not completely, with the addressed 'you.' Though the reader understands that the 'you' in the poem usually does not refer to herself, she cannot help but feel at times, nonetheless, also addressed-included in this 'you.' This triangle and its blurring can give a poem employing direct address the remarkable energies and tensions that in turn can lend tremendous clarity, vividness and richness of tone to its images and gestures.

In this class students will examine direct address in poetry of the past, while looking especially closely at direct address in North American poetry of the late 20th and early 21st centuries, and at philosophical and critical texts concerning notions of the 'I,' the 'You' and 'the Other.' We will examine how in poetry selves are performed and worlds are conjured in descriptions offered up to the Other, whether that Other be lover, friend, stranger, reader or the modern corporation. We will also look at direct address in the use of text in contemporary visual art. Students will apply techniques, insights, and ideas gained from the readings and discussion of the readings in the writing of their own poems: poems which will all be addressed, in one manner or another, to 'you.'

CSCW425 Science Fiction & Modern Fantastic

2 units / Semester II

This creative writing class focuses on contemporary cross-genre works with an emphasis on science fiction, horror and fantasy. Students are introduced to genre works, ranging from turn of the century horror, to contemporary fabulists and fantasists, and to the present practices of the 'new weird.' Short writing projects are peer reviewed in a workshop format. Sub-genres include ghosts, doubles, the modern fairy-tale, body horror/splatterpunk, and fantasy & the postmodern. Materials for study range from the renowned works of Edgar Allan Poe, H.P.

Lovecraft, ETA Hoffman, Donald Barthelme, and David Cronenberg, to the current works of Clive Barker, Aimee Bender, Charles Burns, Michael Chabon, Junji Ito and Kelly Link.

CSCW426 Performance for Writing

2 units / Semester II

CalArts offers courses in writing for performance. This course takes another approach: how does one make the writing perform itself, or, through dictate its performance through its typographic appearance? We will study a range of works—from Kamau Braithwaite's Trenchtown Rock to Schwitters' score for his 'Sonnatta in Urlauten'; from Kearney's libretto for the hyperopera 'Sucktion' to Deborah Richards' closet-opera, 'The Halle Berry One Two'; from wildstyles to Massin's design for Ionesco's The Bald Soprano and others. We will explore digital possibilities as well.

CSCW521 Memory, Media and the City

2 units / Semester II

After five weeks studying memory theory and its relationship to literature and cinema, students develop their own stories, or film scripts, essays, plays, installations where the subtleties of memory (and forgetting) are essential. For example, we will study techniques for 'unreliable narrators,' or how the ambient, expressionist setting is developed, various tricks for interviewing, researching, cannibalizing from the newspaper or from one's own diary entries, building drafts where the ironies of memory are essential.

Humanities

CSHM231 What Is Philosophy?

2 units / Semester I

Philosophy is both an historical product of the Western tradition and a critical tool of inquiry that changes over time and within different contexts. This course will be concerned with introducing students to the foundations of philosophy and exposing them to key issues addressed in philosophy. The course is divided into three main sections, each engaging with a different aspect of the discourse. The first section will focus on the questions: How do we define philosophy? What constitutes philosophical thinking? Does philosophical inquiry (e.g. inquiry into rationality or logic), differ from knowledge in general? How can philosophy be defined in terms of its 'function' and 'reason'? In the second section of the course we will examine how philosophy defines some of its key problems, such as solipsism, objectivity, the mind-body problem, free will, moral and aesthetic judgments and other topics. In the third section, we will examine philosophical positions such as empiricism, idealism, positivism, relativism and pragmatism.

CSHM233 Intro to Lit: Beyond Good and Evil

2 units / Semester II

Beauty walks with Evil, Evil with Beauty

And yet and yet What is evil? And how can literature be used as a space to work through our relations to it? This course looks at a range of approaches to evil in western literature. Topics discussed will include: Sin, redemption, morality, ethics, politics, monsters, freaks, horror, violence obscenity, madness, transgression, idiocy, disease, crime, passion, punishment, confession, truth, lies, and videotapes. The aim of the course is not to make judgments, but to confront the bad that inhabits us all in a space where it is allowed, that is the space of literature

CSHM237 Say It Loud: Rhetoric of American Social Movements

2 units / Semester II

This course explores the rhetorical strategies of twentieth century American social movements: the speeches, manifestos, essays, graphics, films and music that helped shift the terms of political debate and cultural understanding in favor of previously subordinated people(s). We will closely analyze the rhetorical documents of the International Workers of the World (or Wobblies), the Civil Rights Movement, the Black Panthers, the American Indian and Chicano Rights Movements, the Women's Movement, the movement for Gay Liberation, the Anti-War Movement, the Environmental Movement and the Anti-Globalization Movement. For their final project, students will be asked to analyze the rhetoric of a contemporary social movement and make a presentation to the class.

CSHM238 Twentieth-Century Modernism

2 units / Semester I

As a subject of inquiry, twentieth-century aesthetic modernism is far-ranging, encompassing developments not only in painting and sculpture but also in architecture, design, film, and the performing arts. Although the fine arts are the focus of this course, students are encouraged to make connections to their majors while considering the question of modernism's legacy. This course will be an in-depth exploration of major developments in European painting and sculpture from 1880 to 1940. We will be particularly concerned with the relationship of form and content. One of the contentions of scholars is that, beginning with Impressionism, modernists asserted the primacy of content over form. We will apply this contention to different movements and styles, examining how the new forms of modernism served as carriers for historically specific meanings. For our general text, we will use George Heard Hamilton's book, Painting and Sculpture in Europe, 1880-1940 (Yale University Press). All other readings will be available online, or in the Course Reader. Written assignments will consist of three, 4-5 pg. papers on themes and issues highlighted in the readings and analyzed in lectures and group discussions.

CSHM329 America the Question: Introduction to American Literary Modernism

2 units / Semester II

Wikipedia—that great suspect source of collective knowledge—defines American Modernism as 'a trend of thought that affirms the power of human beings to create, improve, and reshape their environment, with the aid of scientific knowledge, technology and practical experimentation, and is thus in its essence both progressive and optimistic.' Is this true? Was modernism, generally understood to be a political, cultural and artistic movement, truly progressive and optimistic? Or is this definition an 'Americanization' of modernism, a rewrite giving a decidedly cheery spin to the cultural impact of such key events and scientific and intellectual developments as World Wars, the Great Depression, the Harlem Renaissance, the theory of relativity, the popularization of Freudian psychoanalysis, the spread of consumer culture, Fordism, the automobile, and the birth of cinema? In this course, we will read several works of American literature from the modernist period (late 1900's to the 1950's), tracing the idea of 'America' in the texts, while also examining the ways in which these texts respond to the historical, technological, intellectual and political conditions of the time. We will see shifting views in immigration, gender, race, and literary form, as well as shifts in notions of 'America' and 'American-ness.' As visual culture plays an important role in our investigation of this period, we will also screen two films during the course of the semester, considering the relationship between film and text. We will, through our reading, viewing and discussing, see how literary history, like history itself, is a collective re-writing of events, not unlike Wikipedia. We will end the semester with a look back at Melville's pre-modernist text, 'Bartleby the Scrivener'-as a complicating pre- and post-cursor to the modernist call to make it new. Texts include work by Anderson, Faulkner, Hurston, Stein, Hemingway, and more.

CSHM332 Marxisms & Anarchisms

2 units / Semester I

Contemporary radical thought, whether we call that political or economic or social thought, is rooted in a radical tradition that through the 19th and 20th centuries has been divided between Marxism and Anarchism. Agreed with regard to the necessity for revolution, thinkers and leaders on either side differ with regard to the nature of that revolution, and with regard to the organization of the society that is to follow afterwards. The purpose of this course is to take what we can from both traditions, particularly the technical, analytic apparatus of Marxism, which is basic to any critical understanding of the nature of capitalism, and from Anarchism a set of models for direct action, decentralization, and self-management. These foundations established in the first half of the course, in the second half we will go on to investigate how orthodox Marxism died, what has become of Anarchist thought, and how these two viewpoints are challenged or reinforced by late 20th century post-structuralist and post-modern theory. We conclude with a careful look at a small set of our own most pressing problems: political representation (or its failure), ecology, the relation of late capitalism and war, and agriculture.

CSHM334 Afterlives of 9/11

2 units / Semester I

In his 'Theses on the Philosophy of History', Walter Benjamin writes that 'to articulate the past historically means to seize hold of a memory as it flashes up at a moment of danger'. The danger, for Benjamin, is that memory risks to become a tool of the ruling classes. And so the historian-aligned here through Benjamin's use of the word 'flash' with the photographer--must try to wrest memory away from those who attempt to appropriate it. This course investigates the afterlives of the September 11 terror attacks in both the United States and abroad from a Benjaminian position, focusing on how the memory of the attacks has been used and abused to produce today's post-September 11 climate of terror. We will look at selected works of journalism, literature, philosophy, and political theory, but also at a number of films, documentaries, graphic novels, and even some architecture, and discuss the aesthetic, ethical, and political challenges that September 11 has posed to artists living and working today. Some of the primary 'texts' to be considered are: Jonathan Safran Foer's novel Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close; Art Spiegelman's comic book In the Shadow of No Towers; Michael Moore's documentary Fahrenheit 9/11; and the documentary about Philippe Petit's wire walk between the Twin Towers, Man on Wire. Theoretical readings will include essays by Martin Amis, Sigmund Freud, Friedrich Nietzsche, and Judith Butler, amongst others.

CSHM335 Queer Books

2 units / Semester II

What makes a book gay or lesbian Or queer? Or even indecent? Is queer writing literature by gays and lesbians or about gays and lesbians? Is there such a thing as 'gay style'? This course looks at contemporary gay/lesbian and 'other' writing which challenges conventions of literature. Experimental writing has a long history of affiliation with gender and sexual experimentation, which invites the reader to look at this work as both a literary and cultural commentary. This work poses questions of sexual identity, of the body, of pain and pleasure, as well as of narrative and language itself.

- Open to the Institute.

CSHM336 Pornography & Sex Writing

2 units / Semester I

While the contemporary meaning of 'pornography' suggests primarily the visual representation of sex, the roots of the word are in language: pornography means 'the writing of harlots.' This course traces literary sex writing from the Marquis de Sade to the contemporary avant-garde and examines the issues of language, the body, thought, sensation and liberation that arise in it. Among the writers we will look at are de Sade, Georges Bataille, Pauline Reage, Jean Genet, Kathy Acker, Dennis Cooper, and John Rechy.

CSHM338 Theorizing the Body

2 units / Semester II

This course investigates Western conceptions of the human body and its role in shaping subjectivity. Readings are drawn from a variety of philosophical and theoretical sources, including Plato, Descartes, Foucault, Bachelard, Irigaray and Haraway. Later in the semester we will consider the body in contemporary art, 'body art' and contemporary cultural practices of body modification, with special attention to what it means to have a body or be embodied in the era of virtual reality.

CSHM339 Ghost Faces

2 units / Semester I

Despite the premium placed on 'keeping it real,' many rappers have consciously used personas to develop entire mythologies, make social critique and to expand the limits of their aesthetic practices. Yet, the nature of the rap persona has roots beyond mere stage names. We will focus not merely on aliases, but on bodies of work in which the flexibility of performed identity is used for critical, aesthetic and political ends. By exploring the syncretic methodology of the Wu-Tang Clan, the bisected psychodramas of DMX and DOOM, the raw signifying of Ice Cube on 'Ice Cube,' we'll make connections to survival and creative strategies long practiced in African American communities which have led to ironic relationships to authenticity. We will also look at the significant shifts in contemporary hip hop culture where persona butts against realness with violent outcomes.

CSHM434 Psychoanalysis, Semiotics and Literature

2 units / Semester II

Psychoanalysis, Semiotics and Literature: The labyrinth of individual development as seen through the writings of James Joyce. This course will focus on James Joyce's 'A Portrait of The Artist as a Young Man' and sections of 'Ulysses' as primary texts for discussing psycho-analytic themes revolving around death and rebirth, creativity, separation and loss of the mother and father, identification with the maternal body and the unconscious dynamics of subjectivity. The individual journey of development will be looked at in reference to the larger collective cultural constructs of the family, church, state, art and the laws of gender. Readings from the field of semiotics will be utilized to explore Joyce's use of language as a facilitating and transformative medium for his exploration of the unconscious force of the maternal body in the masculine imagination.

CSHM437 Kafka Rules: Writing in Response to the Work of Franz Kafka 2 units / Semester II

In this course students will examine, inhabit and respond to the fictional work of Franz Kafka and some of the major 20th century ideas with which this work is in conversation. Readings will include a selection of Kafka's shorter short stories and parables, longer stories such as 'The Metamorphosis,' 'In the Penal Colony,' and 'The Judgment,' and excerpts from his novels The Trial and The Castle. Writing assignments will use these Kafka texts as inspiration, subject matter and material for students' writings as they respond to and experiment with and within these works whose singular comedy and dread, uncanny clarity and precise absurdity necessitated the coinage of their own adjective. Students will write prose poems or 'short-short fiction,' as well as forming their own texts by erasing and/or otherwise occupying texts of Kafka's. In a critical paper students will apply ideas from secondary theoretical sources from the syllabus to Kafka's work. These theoretical readings will include work of Louis Althusser, Elaine Scarry, Max Weber, Slavoj Žižek, Gilles Deleuze and Felix Guattari, Jacques Lacan, Elias Canetti, Sigmund Freud, and Walter Benjamin as well as additional short readings on the anthropology of the state and the history and anthropology of naming practices.

CSHM439 Lessons on Being and Becoming: Perspectives in Modern Philosophy 2 units / Semester II

A course introducing students to modern philosophy through a selection of readings from works by Hume, Kant, Schelling, Hegel, Husserl, Heidegger, Bergson, Wittgenstein, Sartre, de Beauvoir, Levinas and Derrida. The course follows the themes of Being and Becoming in modern philosophy, varying in range of philosophical texts from issues such as empiricism and rationalism to idealism, phenomenology and existentialism to deconstruction. We will follow both expositions and critiques of various conceptions of Being and Becoming in respect to questions concerning the nature of reality, representation and cognition. The first section will focus on Hume, Kant, Schelling and Hegel and epistemological questions concerning Being: Hume's problem of induction; Kant's demarcation of knowledge; Schelling's teleology and Hegel's philosophy of history and dialectics. The second section will focus on Husserl, Heidegger, Bergson and Wittgenstein: Husserl's phenomenological analyses of Being, Heidegger's conception of Being and time and poetry, Bergson's notion of duration and Becoming and Wittgenstein's socio-linguistic philosophy and his concept of language games. The third section will explore some aspects of Being and Becoming in the writings of Sartre, de Beauvoir, Levinas and Derrida. Sartre's existential psychoanalysis in Being and Nothingness; de Beauvoir's early conception of feminism in The Second Sex; Levinas' conception of Being, temporality and the other and Derrida's critical assessments of both Being and Becoming in relation to western philosophical thought.

CSHM440 Take Care of Yourself (On Bio-Technics) 2 units / Semester I

When French artist Sophie Calle was dumped by her boyfriend with a letter that ended with the words 'Take care of yourself', she started to wonder what that imperative might mean. So she decided to ask over one hundred women-psychoanalysts, actresses, singer-songwriters, copy-editors, etiquette consultants, et cetera--to interpret the letter according to their professional activities. Their responses were collected in Calle's work Take Care of Yourself. Art functioned as therapy here and helped Calle to come to terms with the breakup. Starting from Calle's artwork, this course investigates the long history of philosophical reflections on 'the care of the self' (also referred to as the 'cultivation of the self' or the 'art of existence'), ranging from Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics and Paul's 'Letter to the Romans' to contemporary thinkers such as Michel Foucault and Bernard Stiegler. The course focuses on the different 'techniques' of care-taking that these authors discuss, specifically on the relation in their texts between 'technics' and 'life' (what we will call 'bio-technics'). We will study, for example, reflections on bio-technics in the works of Martin Heidegger, Gilbert Simondon, and Giorgio Agamben. Throughout the course, special attention will be paid to the resonances of Calle's work in US society today, specifically with reference to the current health-care debates and the question of biological life's relation to political power.

Special Topics in Humanities

CSHM531 20th Century Theory 2 units / Semester I

This course will introduce a series of dominant critical-theoretical trends, each of which has had a decisive influence on the way in which contemporary artistic practice is understood. We will engage as thoroughly as possible with both the historical foundations of each of these trends and with its significance for thought and criticism today. On the whole, our aim will be to establish a solid foundation for dealing with a wide range of contemporary aesthetic and political approaches. To this end we will move sequentially through a series of interdependent types of critique, from Critical Theory's early treatments of aesthetic and temporal relations to commodities, to theories of ideology, through a particular line of feminist and gender critique deeply connected with psychoanalysis, to semiotic approaches. Then we will move to critique dealing specifically with social space, with bodily practices, and finally with systems, networks and relations. Texts will vary from straight theory, to art-historical and art-critical, to artists' own writings. On the theoretical side these will include classic, seminal texts by Marx, Nietzsche, Freud, Lacan, Adorno and Benjamin, 1960s-1980s staples like DeBord, Althusser, Foucault, Barthes, Kaja Silverman and Slavoj Žižek, and contemporary material including Brian Massumi and Nicolas Bourriaud. Texts by artists will include Antonin Artaud, Allan Kaprow, Adrian Piper, Joseph Beuys, Matt Mullican, the Critical Art Ensemble and Olafur Eliasson. Our treatment of particular texts will be regularly accompanied by attention to specific artistic practice.

CSHM538 Contemporary Film Theory 3 units / Semester II

This seminar builds on a previous seminar in Classical Film Theory, though a student need not have taken that course or be a student of film to enroll. The course is in fact designed to profit writers of all disciplines. Beginning with certain philosophical considerations surrounding Modernism and Existentialism, we will move on to examine the intertextuality of contemporary film theory with other contemporary bodies of 'high' theory including Structuralism, Psychoanalysis, Feminism, Post-structuralism, and then proceed to investigate the 'post-theoretical' challenges of Post-modernism, Cultural Studies, and The End of Cinema. Rigorous readings will be accompanied by weekly lectures and screenings. The inter-connected nature of the seminar demands sustained attendance, and students will be required to write focused weekly responses to the films with the context of the readings and lectures. A final written exam or proposed creative project will also be required.

CS539 Technology and the Social-Historical Construction of Perception

2 units / Semester II

The course investigates the historical production of particular modes of perception, in tandem with the large-scale distribution of technologies like photography, film, computers, automobiles, and planes. It begins with normative classical and modern presentations of processes of sensation, in Plato and Descartes. It then looks carefully at a set of disciplinary and scientific practices carried out through the course of the 18th and 19th centuries, designed intentionally to emphasize or de-emphasize one or another sense, or to habituate the experiencing of a particular sense-usually vision-in a particular way. For these purposes we will read Jonathon Crary, Martin Jay and Robert D'Arca. Then we will turn our attention to a particular critique of 20th-century perception. This latter line of discourse begins around 1900, with George Simmel's essay 'The Metropolis and Modern Life.' Freud developed his concept of shock and repetition compulsion in The Ego and the Id largely from that source; Walter Benjamin developed his seminal piece on the social-political function of film, 'The Work of Art in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction,' from Freud's model. Benjamin's piece, as fragmented and ambiguous as it is, really forms the heart of this course. What it suggests is that socially-prevalent amusements can carry out extremely deep behavioral modifications, which may have a use for either reactive or revolutionary politics. Film produces the dual characteristics of distraction with regard to images-and a capacity for uninterrupted image-consumption-and a heightened receptivity with regard to the format of images and to the context of their deployment. Through the technologies of film, television the internet, video games, we come to be continually submerged in streams of images. While consciously engaged in a distracted intensity only with that stream, we are unconsciously acted upon by the physical circumstances we actually inhabit. Marshall McLuhan, Paul Virilio and Neil Postman offer continuations of this manner of critique, focusing on different technologies and their observable effects on the format and organization of our perceptions as well as upon the sorts of activities in which we can and do engage. The last correspondence that we will pursue is that between the development of the sensory technologies in question and the specifically military activities for which they are often developed and in which they are first employed.

CSSS240 Introduction to Modern Political Thought

3 units / Semester II

This course is an introduction to the study of politics. After the Renaissance and the Reformation started to undermine the theological basis of the Feudal political order, European societies developed the central forms of legitimacy and political imagination that have dominated the West until the present. The constellation of institutions, practices and theories we call 'modern democracy' was originally theorized in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

During these times, authors such as Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau, and Kant created the vocabulary that later inspired the foundation and self-understanding of most of the political orders (including the so-called 'global order') in which we now live. It was during this process that the idea of the contract and the revolution became the central organizing concepts of modern politics. During the semester we will thus read the major works of the mentioned authors and engage in an analysis of the historical and conceptual transition from 'theologico-political' to 'democratico-political' orders-i.e. a process in which demos replaced theos as the basis of political legitimacy. Moreover, during the semester we will use the newly acquired vocabulary to engage in the interpretation of the current state of domestic and global politics. Are the institutions, practices, and theories developed by the founders of modern democracy in crisis? Is it possible to think of 'regime change' as something currently taking place both in the U.S. and the international order? We will also inquire, in short, on the meaning and status of politics in the contemporary world.

CSSS242 Imaging Culture: Representation and Visual Anthropology

2 units / Semester I

As the discipline originally chartered to classify 'races of man,' images and their interpretation have long been important components of anthropology. From early anthropometrics and photographic recordings of rituals and daily practices, to ethnographic film and multimedia works, anthropologists have integrated visuals in a range of forms and uses that closely parallel technological developments in imaging. This extensive integration, however, has been accompanied by a sometimes conflicting set of positions regarding visuals and their relationship to methodology, representation, and interpretation. This course explores issues of debate that visuals stimulate in ethnographic projects as well as the methods used to produce them. It takes a survey approach to anthropological visuals, with an emphasis on works that have shifted the perspective of how images and their production impact relationships among subjects, between subjects and ethnographers, between ethnographers and their work, and between these works and their audiences.

CSSS311 Feminist & Queer Theory

2 units / Semester I

This class will give students a brief but crucial grounding in some of the major concepts, debates, and critical texts to emerge in feminist and queer studies over the past few decades, while also keeping an eye out to the relationship between these theories and the lived process of art-making. The first third of the class will focus on feminist texts; the next third, on queer theory; the last third, on the intersection of theoretical work, contemporary issues, and art practice. Issues we will likely touch on include: relations between feminist theory, queer theory, and critical race theory; the problematics of identity politics; distinctions between gender and sexuality; the rise of the transgender movement and its effects; the 'difference vs. equality' debate; relations between aesthetics and activism; current debates over gay marriage, privatization, neo-liberalism, and normativity; notions of utopia, pragmatism, and disobedience.

CSSS332 Engagement by Design: The Social Turn in Architecture and Design

2 units / Semester II

This class will investigate recent and contemporary design that puts social and political questions at the center of its practice. Moving beyond the Modernist maxim form = function to take up further questions of engagement and materiality, we will trace strains of contemporary design and architecture that re-evaluate and re-shape our notions of use and necessity. Looking to the edges of architectural, graphic, industrial and product design discourse, Activating Engagement explores the social dimensions of the world of objects, with special attention to furniture, mobile architecture, temporary structures, consumer products and landscape, interface and information design.

CSSS342 Mega Cities of Asia: Architecture, Urbanism and Identity

2 units / Semester I

The 'city' is of interest to geographers, political scientists, architects and artists alike. Heading into the 21st century, the world now holds 23 cities with populations in excess of 10 million. These 'mega-cities' will be the defining settlements that determine how we will live on this planet in the next century. Globalization has overwhelmingly been an urbanizing phenomenon and it is creating inequalities both within and between cities and their rural hinterlands. The processes of economic globalization during the 1990s have perhaps most radically affected Asian cities. Though the case of Chinese cities may be the most stunning, significant cultural and political transformations are also going on in Mumbai, in Singapore, and in Kuala Lumpur. We will examine how these cities become the sites of an intensified circulation of people and cultural artifacts, migration, and new forms of tourism and how city cultures are in the forefront of constructing the social and cultural imaginaries of the future. The focus will be on the ways in which economic interests shape and define the landscape of modern cities as opposed to the wishes of urban planners and its inhabitants. The effects of mass tourism and globalization on cities everywhere in the world-and the question whether cities will be able to maintain their distinctive character or will become reproducible and homogenized entities will be the main focus of this course. There will be two mandatory field trips to explore Asia in LA and to examine the other side of the local-global nexus.

CSSS343 From Couch to Neuropsychanalysis

2 units / Semester I

Psychoanalytic theory is crucial to our modern understanding of the mind and is utilized throughout psychological models, but also in literary and film criticism. This course covers major ideas from psychoanalytic theory starting with Freud and moving into Object Relations Theory, Analytic Psychology, Feminist Psychoanalysis, Lacanian theory and integrative models of neurobiology and psychoanalysis. Readings will be from original texts and discussion will involve points of intersection, creative elaboration and difference between models with regard to the development of the mind, the notion of the self, consciousness, the unconscious and human behavior.

CSSS347 An Interrogation of Modernity and Capitalism in Latin America

2 units / Semester II

How has modernity and its attendant economic form capitalism been dealt with by the various social actors in Latin America, over time as well as in the present moment? In what ways have these groups been able to negotiate, channel, deflect, and transform the forces of ideas and the market into ways that will enhance their communities or networks? How have the nations and citizens of Latin America fared in the midst of the "Neo-Liberal" Revolution? This course will use a number of social and cultural thinkers, including Nestor Garcia Canclini, Deleuze and Guattari, and Jean Franco, to engage in the debates surrounding the conditions in Latin America at this historical conjuncture. The course will then shift to an examination of how artists of various genres and periods, including the plastic arts, literature, film and video, have dealt with these forces.

CSSS348 The Sixties

3 units / Semester II

In our tendency to characterize time by socially significant decades, the 1960s stands out. It has entered our historical and cultural consciousness as a period of contestation, turbulence even of revolution. It is typified as a time when art and politics came together as natural allies to express opposition to the political, cultural, and sexual status quo. The course will examine 'The Sixties' from two primary perspectives: It will undertake an analysis of the distinctive political events that are now part of our historical memory: the Cold War, the Civil Rights Movement, the Vietnam War, Black Consciousness, Feminism, etc. It will consider how films of or about the decade expressed these changing sensibilities and behavior.

CSSS441 Ahimsa: a Culture of Peace Nonviolence in the Modern World

2 units / Semester II

This seminar explores the theoretical underpinnings of an Ahimsa /nonviolence paradigm. Through several historical case studies we will examine how nonviolence offers an approach to peacemaking that has been used not only to counteract forms of social discrimination and political repression but also to resist foreign imperialism or occupation. Many, who battle oppression and injustice today, now recognize the enormous power of global media to coordinate activities, plan protests, and publicize often high quality information about their causes. We will analyze how Global media may play a central and unique role in enabling to achieve human rights and democracy, as nonviolent groups are seeking to displace arbitrary rule in nations such as Burma and Zimbabwe, struggling for self-determination in places such as Tibet, and organizing nonviolent action for human rights and democracy in Cuba, Iran and other countries. Such explorations hopefully will provide a new understanding of human history from a fresh perspective of transformation and change through nonviolent means. The study of some key twentieth century individuals such as, Gandhi, Nehru, The Dalai Lama, Martin Luther King, Rosa Parks, Nelson Mandela, Charles Perkins, Cesar Chavez, Muhammad Ali, Mairead O'Riordan, and Betty Williams, Madres de Plaza de Mayo, Aung San Suu Kyi, Student Activists of Tiananmen Square, Vaclav Havel, Wangari Maathai, Vandana Shiva and Mohammad Yunus and many other contemporary leaders and activists, will stimulate our critical reflection about the relevance of nonviolence, global activism and global media in the contemporary context. Each student will identify a particular non-violent movement for social change and/or organization and provide to the class periodic reports and critical analyses on the activities of that movement or organization, applying the principles and lessons drawn from the course.

CSSS442 Contemp Latin American Film/Tv/Video

3 units / Semester I

This course will address the production of images in Latin America, focusing on current trends in film, television and video. Beginning with a brief history of the film and television industries, including Mexico's 'Golden Age' of cinema, Brazil's Cine Novo, post-revolutionary Cuban film, Televisa and TV Globo, the course will analyze the contemporary styles and thematics of image production from the region. A key focus will be on how Latin American thinkers have viewed the process, using such concepts as Third Cinema, Cannibalist Aesthetics, Imperfect Cinema, and the Aesthetics of Hunger. What types of images are being created at this historical juncture, and how have they been influenced by globalization? Who controls the production and distribution process? Finally, what do the artists of Latin America have to say about the creative conditions in their particular countries?

CSSS443 Mystery of Consciousness

2 units / Semester I

The 'problem' of consciousness remains one of the great mysteries challenging neuroscientists, cognitive scientists, physicists, philosophers, psychologists, mystics and poets indeed all of us in one way or another. This class surveys major theories of consciousness as they have been informed by and have informed changing religious, scientific, cultural and philosophical paradigms.

CSSS445 Urban Situation: Art and the City

2 units / Semester II

This course will examine 'the urban situation' of artists and writers from the nineteenth century to contemporary times. While standard art and literary histories have emphasized how artists and writers have made 'imaginative capital' of the city, thus transforming the urban landscape into an icon of modernity, recent scholarship focuses on the complex 'network cultures' of modernism and postmodernism. Focusing on such issues as artistic identity, urban neighborhoods, patronage and the art market, our goal will be to understand how the modern city in Europe and America functioned as a critical network of support for living, working, exhibiting, and selling aesthetic culture. Readings will draw from urban theory and history, art history and artists' writings. For those readings not available online, there will be a Course Reader. Assignments will include one 5-8 pg. paper, due mid-semester, and a final project. Students will research and present projects at the end of term.

CSSS451 Who Comes After the Human?

2 units / Semester II

At the end of his book The Order of Things, Michel Foucault writes that human beings are 'an invention of recent date' who might at some point be erased 'like a face drawn in sand at the edge of the sea'. This course starts from one obvious question that this statement raises: if human beings might at some point be erased, then who or what will come after the human? Our answer will perhaps be surprising: we will explore the possibility that the future that Foucault was anticipating has in the meantime arrived, and that we have become posthuman. This will involve thinking through the human's relation to the animal, the inhuman, and technology. The first part of the course looks at the origins of current reflections on the post-human in the writings of Gilbert Simondon, Gilles Deleuze and Félix Guattari, Jean-François Lyotard, and Donna Haraway. The second part of the course focuses on the notion of the posthuman as it has been developed in the writings of critics such as Katherine Hayles, R.L. Rutsky, Francis Fukuyama, and Cary Wolfe. Special attention will be paid to the importance of feminism (specifically, technofeminism) for these discourses. Class discussions will also take into account films such as Andrew Stanton's Wall-E, Werner Herzog's Grizzly Man, Ridley Scott's Blade Runner, and David Cronenberg's The Fly, as well as literary works such as Franz Kafka's 'The Metamorphosis' and J.M. Coetzee's The Lives of Animals.

Special Topics in Social ScienceCSSS543 Sufi Literature, Mysticism, Music, Dance and the Self

2 units / Semester I

In this course we will examine why Sufis place so much emphasis on music, and Dance, commonly associated with the 'Whirling Dervishes' and the profoundly beautiful poetry of the great mystics like, Jallal-ud-din Rumi, Rūbī'a, Junayd, Hallāj, Ibn al-'Arabī, al-Ghazzālī, Hafiz and Farid-ud-Din Attar. Our focus will be to understanding how Sufi poetry and music are used to open the inner self to its own reality. How poetry and music can create an 'altered state of consciousness' and that some form of altered consciousness is needed to awaken an individual to the reality of who he or she 'really' is and what that self consists in. While paying particular attention to the roles played by the main masters of Sufis in Turkey, and Persia, we will also focus on the local traditions of Andulasia, Egypt, Iraq, South, and South East Asia. Themes include, tradition of love mysticism embodied by Rumi, the metaphysical formulations of Ibn al-Arabi, poetics and pilgrimage traditions, of Rabia, and the various meditative techniques of Sama and Dhikr in the final fulfillment in Annihilation of the self or fana.

CSSS546 Geographies of Violence: Women in Conflict Zones

2 units / Semester I

Drawing upon scholarship from political geography of violence, ethnic -nationalisms, feminism and identity this course attempts to map the contours of women in war zones, in refugee camps, and in regions engulfed in religious fundamentalism(s). The course will focus on women in various conflict zones from Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, and Bosnia, to Philippines, Rwanda/Congo, Burma, Sudan, Mexico, Guatemala and Somalia, where the rules of war are changing dramatically. Distinctions between battlefield and home, soldier and civilian, state security and domestic security are breaking down. In this course we will investigate what happens when the body, household, nation, state, and economy become sites at which violence is invoked against women. In particular, an analysis of this conflict will move us forward in our understanding of violence against women-how it is perpetrated, survived, and resisted. Our focus will be to examine women not only as pawns, and victims of rape and sexual violence but to also analyze how women may become mediators, peacemakers, justice-seekers, and human rights advocates in these areas. Topics will focus on questions around nationalism and gender relations, globalization and war, violence and women's rights, women's empowerment in war, gender and citizenship, women's honor and war, Each student will identify a particular 'conflict Zone' and provide to the class periodic reports and critical analyses on the activities of women's movement or organization in their chosen conflict zone, applying the principles and lessons drawn from the course.

Cultural StudiesCS456 Art and Postcolonial Theory

2 units / Semester I

Especially designed for students who can believe that there is no conflict in discussing aesthetic and social ideas, this critical theory course will study the development of postcolonial theory from its beginnings found in the writings of Fanon and Foucault to the most recent expressions of Said, Spivak and Bhabha. Through readings, slide presentations, lectures and class discussions we will consider postcolonialism as an alternative to critical strategies that are based in logocentric constructions of alterity, and which inform a split in our understanding of race on the one hand, and aesthetic judgments on the other. We will show how such strategies perpetuate age old binary oppositions that privilege insular theories of artistic production, and how postcolonialism, being a radical critique of culture, undermines such hierarchies by functioning as an ethics of radicalism in general, especially as it applies to art. Included in this investigation is a discussion of works of art and museum exhibitions that have attempted to demonstrate a fundamental paradox in the traditional conflation of 'good' art with universal values. These exhibitions attempted to rewrite our idea of history by implementing a postcolonial critical strategy which maps out an alternative historical view, an aesthetic and ethical landscape that is not bifurcated by racial difference, a critical space where notions of identity politics are not clearly differentiated from aesthetic radicalism. This course will consider that invention in art is not only part of modernism and its interest in transcendental judgments, but essential to both postmodernism and postcolonialism

CSCS252 European Studies: Monsters, Madmen and the Double

3 units / Semester II

From the period of the French Revolution to the First World War, many European writers, painters, architects, 'fantaissistes,' are obsessed with the interior journey, with vanishing, divided, paranoiac, alienated models of the self. Among subjects enroute: Romanticism, Symbolism, Aestheticism, Decadence, modernity, 'psycho-geographies,' the optical codes and novelties that lead to cinema provide background for Surrealism, Expressionism.

CSCS253 Music, Culture & Politics in Latin America

2 units / Semester I

Latin America has produced some of the richest and most innovative music in the world, ranging from samba and boleros to contemporary roqueros and raperos. What cultural, economic, and social conditions have produced this wealth of music? What are the African, Spanish, Portuguese, and indigenous origins of the various styles and rhythms? Music in the region has been very involved in the political and social debates within the various countries, and this course will address the myriad ways in which musical styles and content interact with pressing national and regional questions. Finally, how has music from Latin America blended with new styles from around the world, and what are some of the current trends emerging from this mixing?

CSCS256 Infrastructure and the Imaginary

2 units / Semester I

This class will investigate sites of presumed stability located between landscape and architecture, looking to infrastructure to activate a number of questions related to form and function. How is the built environment shaped by water, power, waste disposal and transportation systems? What social networks are given form through infrastructure and land use? How have artists employed infrastructure to make visible hidden relationships and power dynamics? We will investigate the complex technological systems that deliver basic services as a way to think about public space and to reflect creatively on the structures that shape our daily lives. Structured as a seminar, with readings and in-class discussion, the class will also involve field trips to a variety of locations in Santa Clarita associated with infrastructure. In addition, we will consider our broader relationship to 'place' and how it functions in the construction of social and political identities.

CSCS258 The Art of the Invisible: Experiments in Radio Production and Podcasting

3 units / Semester I

This class is a survey of the art of radio and a workshop in creative radio & podcast production. Radio is a medium that has had tremendous cultural and political impact. Yet it is also a medium that offers remarkable intimacy and poetry, a realm of almost pure imagination. Using simple and cheap recording equipment and free downloadable editing software, podcasting and internet radio offer unprecedented opportunities for the self-made radio artist to produce his or her own work and reach a broad audience. In this course, we will examine the theory and aesthetics radio as well as develop the hands-on skill and experience required to control the medium.

CSCS259 Foxy Brown: Tracking Representations of Black Female Sexuality

2 units / Semester II

Where do images of the hypersexualized black female body originate? What are the underlying assumptions behind these images? What social and cultural functions do these portrayals serve? Why is the private matter of black female sexuality a public concern? This seminar will provide an in-depth analysis of images of the hypersexualized black female in films, videos, cartoons, literature, music, and advertising. The course will consider the fetishism of the black female body and will examine the treatment of this figure as a sign of deviance and transgression. The course will draw on current scholarship in black feminist studies and discuss intersections with critical theories on 'the grotesque,' and 'the monstrous'. Central to the course are representations of black female sexuality by African American artists including dancers Josephine Baker, Catherine Dunham and the Urban Bush Women; writers Elizabeth Alexander, Octavia Butler, Zora Neale Hurston, and Toni Morrison; hip hop and neo-soul artists Missy Elliot, Lil' Kim, and Queen Latifah; film-maker Cheryl Dunye; and visual artists Chakaia Booker, Barbara Chase-Riboud, Renee Cox, Ellen Gallagher, Wangechi Mutu, Faith Ringgold, Alison Saar, Kara Walker, and Deborah Willis.

CSCS310 Theater of the Oppressed: The Aesthetic Language of Augusto Boal

3 units / Semester II

This course investigates the philosophical principles and practical techniques that constitute Theatre of the Oppressed (TO), the aesthetic language developed by Brazilian social activist and theatre director, Augusto Boal. TO consists of five formats: Forum Theatre, Image Theatre, Cop-in-the-Head, Invisible Theatre, and Legislative Theatre. All are participatory: in lieu of audience passivity, spectators become spect-actors who employ dramatic tools to uncover, analyze, and ultimately intervene critically in (staged and real) scenarios of institutionalized oppression. We will study in depth three primary influences on Boal -- Paulo Freire's radical pedagogy, Bertolt Brecht's epic theatre, and Brazilian carnival and consequently notions of dialectics, praxis, alienation-effect, historicization, heterogeneity, and polyphony. In embodying TO techniques, we will discover how the theoretical premises of his work are (or are not) made manifest in his techniques. Boal's 'rehearsals for revolution' have been adapted by activists, therapists, educators, and artists on seven continents and thus we will also explore how effectively modular techniques translate cross-culturally. Lastly, we will explore equivalents of Boal's critical concepts (i.e., metaxis, analogical induction, aesthetic space, joker system) in fields of complexity theory, ethics, social psychology, trauma studies, liberation theology, and biology.

CSCS333 No Innocent Eye: Literature and Medicine

2 units / Semester II

This hybrid endeavor both a cultural studies course and a creative writing workshop will examine medicine not as a removed, scientific process but as a cultural phenomenon with complex narratives that have very real effects on our lived experience: how we understand what it means to be healthy, sick, mentally ill, sane, fragmented, whole, etc. We'll read short stories, memoirs, non-fiction and theoretical texts that grapple with issues such as cancer, madness, mortality, hermaphroditism, elective amputation, pain, doctor-patient dynamics, sexuality and desire, and medicine-as-performance.

Medicine and art have a long history of overlap and entwinement from Leonardo da Vinci to early photography's documentation of hysteria to the popularity of television shows like Grey's Anatomy. While we will touch upon the relationships between medicine and visual art, the class is primarily focused on how we might rethink medicine via literary categories such as subtext, detail and point of view, and how we can also recast and explore literary techniques in light of medical perspectives. That is, we will continually ask ourselves how and why facets of medicine are relevant to writers and artists, and vice versa.

Expect rigorous class discussion, in-class writing exercises, weekly short writing assignments and one longer piece fiction or creative non-fiction, your choice to be workshopped by the group. You will be required to expand and revise this piece for your final project.

CSCS350 The End: Cross Cultural Look at Death

2 units / Semester II

One of the only certain universal experiences for all human beings is death. However, nearly every aspect of that experience varies from culture to culture. How do we respond to the dying? How do we mark their passing? What is done with the body? How is the person remembered by the living? Is there life after death? This course is an exploration into the rituals, beliefs, and customs of varied cultures and religions surrounding death and dying. We will discuss concepts of the soul, grief and mourning, symbolism, origin myths, burial rituals and more. This course seeks to open our minds to the wide cultural and religious variety of approaches to 'The End' of life as a rite of passage.

CSCS351 Buying & Selling the Fantasy of L.A.

2 units / Semester II

How did Los Angeles become the capital of boosterism and global marketing—the city of the social imaginary? A social history of power, promotion and social conflict in L.A. What is the relationship between Hollywood cinema and the fact of this city? What does the dark (noir) vision actually represent? From film fantasies to the actual neighborhoods that are hidden by myths of the city, we venture into a century of swindles, duplicity and simple survival, the mundane facts that are essential to understanding the fantasies. What took place behind the civil disturbance, the biblical plagues, and the strange architectural simulation: how to locate the layers of the city. A survey of ethnic groups who emigrated here, of the in-migration as well, of the inner basin and the metropolitan suburbs; and of course, the transitions into the next century.

CSCS356 Blood in the Water: the Middle Passage in History and Art

2 units / Semester II

The Middle Passage—the route many ships traveled to transport Africans to slavery in the New World—is a critical element of world history. Further, it continues to impact our socio-cultural landscape as a trope in the arts. Through this course, we will explore the Middle Passage in three ways: 1) History: we will study texts and documentaries to gain an understanding of the conditions under which the Middle Passage developed and to learn in more detail the human interactions during the voyages. 2) Art: we will then explore consciously aestheticized work based on the Middle Passage in a range of media—literary, cinematic, visual, performative. We will see that artists have engaged the trope satirically, melodramatically, realistically and critically. 3) Projects: The Middle Passage has impacted all of us. Its forced migration of Africans to America has been an essential dynamic of the culture we live in. We will propose our own projects on the Middle Passage. These proposals will involve artist statements and can include anything from poetry, to dance, installations to scripts, sculpture to interdisciplinary projects.

the French New Wave, political counter-cinema after 1968, the emergence of digital and electronic media, the use of the moving image as both medium and cultural resource for gallery-based works of art, and memory as a central representational trope of contemporary culture. Much as these contexts might alter some of the ways we perceive Chris Marker, the very choice of Marker as a means to engage these wider developments can also enrich and transform our understanding of the cultural movements and contexts in and against which his work has emerged.

CSCS357 History of Comic Books

2 units / Semester II

This is a critical/historical survey of the unique visual/narrative medium known as the comic book. Charting the medium's development from the hieroglyph to the comic strip to the comic book to the graphic novel that thrives today, this course is primarily concerned with how comics aka graphic literature has developed and matured as a distinctly American art/narrative form which is constantly mutating, reflecting and commenting on American society. In addition to reading representative works from each of era of the comic book's development, students will also be reading the admittedly few, but remarkable works of criticism and theory. In this way they will learn the basics of how comics use signs both verbally and visually to communicate narrative meanings. Further, students will learn how to decode the comic's unique visual narrative, examining its denotative and connotative codes as well as unraveling the contexts of social relations to examine the cultural representations (and often critiques) found therein.

CSCS358 A Collision of Voice: Fissure and Multiplicity in Latin American Literature

2 units / Semester I

This class will look at wide range of diverse works—manifestos, oral history, revolutionary accounts, poems, autobiographies, short stories, historic accounts, songs and novel excerpts—to investigate the pluralistic nature of Latin American literary production from The Pre-Columbian Era to the present. The course will pay close attention to the dynamic history and politics of the region, as well as the multicultural nature of the societies in which work was produced. Texts will include works of indigenismo, gaucho literature, Mexican corrido, and Afro-Americanism.

CSCS359 Community to Cadence: Writers of Color in the 21st Century

2 units / Semester II

Part cultural studies seminar and part creative writing workshop, this course will focus on a broad array of contemporary writers of color with an eye toward exploring the cultural and socio-political issues that inform their work. Alongside the study of these writers, we will develop ways to use each students' own historical trajectory and lived experiences to shape their craft and aesthetics as writers and artists.

Please note that every effort will be made to make this class universally accessible. Though 'reasonable accommodation' is the legal right of people with disabilities, this course is designed to be universally accessible for students regardless of disability or other individual categorization. If you anticipate issues related to the format or requirements of the course, please meet with the instructor to discuss ways to ensure your full participation in the course.

CSCS404 Hooded and Headless: Anonymity, Surveillance, and the Face in Recent Art and Life

2 units / Semester II

From the advent of the 'webcam' on the internet to the chilling photos of torture from abu ghraib, from the ethical turn of recent philosophy to the development of surveillance that relies on facial recognition technology, 'the face' (or 'faciality,' as Deleuze had it) has become an intense locus for contemporary discourse around issues of identity, privacy, specificity, empathy, identification, ethical action, dehumanization, and liberty. This course will explore these issues via an exploration of faciality and effacement in recent art and life. We will begin with physiology, reading work on the human brain's response to other human faces. We will then turn our attention to philosophers such as Emmanuel Levinas and Judith Butler, who have utilized 'the face' as a potential ground for ethical action. We will then consider a variety of related political and artistic instances and issues, such as the function of masks as vehicles for the performance of liberty in a culture of surveillance, and the role of the 'close-up' in film vs. Brechtian distancing techniques in theater. Reading will include work by writers such as Hannah Arendt, Franco Berardi, Slavoj Žižek, Deleuze and Guattari, Jean-Jacques Rousseau, Frantz Fanon, and Subcomandante Marcos; artists considered will include Andy Warhol, Luther Price, Paul McCarthy, Wayne Hodge, Julia Scher, Manu Luksch, and Ambient TV, and others.

CSCS405 Photographs Make Reality

2 units / Semester II

We are constantly addressed-by corporations, by commodities, by politics, by art-as free-thinking individuals with the capacity to make choices and judgments, while our every action effects our participation in populations not of our choosing - demographics, marketing categories, target groups, social class, minorities, majorities. Driven on the one hand by democratic politics and on the other by the market for commodities, these two dominant forms of social being, individualism and populations, seem to cramp the space for being together, for social encounter, for intimacy and belonging. In this class, we will ask what forms of intimacy people invent in the cramped space between individualism and populations. As many new forms of intimacy are screen-based, we will draw our cases from aesthetic remediations of intimacy (artworks, novels, films, television) as well as from contemporary ethnographies of web culture. Also relevant will be the popular opinion pieces that try to make historical change graspable and familiar, from stories of decline (e.g., search engines are making people stupid; video games are making children lazy and anti-social) to stories of progress (e.g., online, we can be post-racial and postgender; everyone cannot participate in culture and politics; previously marginalized cultures can thrive). We will set these questions within a longer political history of individualism and the population form, starting from early liberalism and extending to contemporary neoliberalism. CSCS453 Borges and the Political

2 units / Semester II

The course will focus on the political reading of Argentine writer Jorge Luis Borges. This project is a complex and multilayered one. Borges (1899-1986) was a terribly sophisticated fiction writer and thinker who had a long and ambivalent relationship to Argentinean and Latin American democratic politics. Although he was not, strictly speaking, a 'political' writer, his texts nonetheless constantly engaged in the indirect understanding of our shared, political worlds. The course will thus proceed to study Borges' work by paying attention to his references to 'the political' as such, as a dimension of human existence, and to his 'polities', the actual human communities to which he belonged. Borges was also a citizen of the world, of course. Thus one aspect of the course will focus on his fiction and non-fiction critique of Nazism and Fascism, as well as his views of world affairs in general. In particular, we will explore Borges' early essays and 'detour of fiction' on the questions of totalitarianism and democracy. The course will then continue by engaging his different stories, essays, and poems from the perspective of a number of contemporary thinkers. The latter will include Claude Lefort, Robert Nozick, Remi Brague, Hannah Arendt, Beatriz Sarlo, Michael Foucault, Jacques Rancière, William Egginton, Alain Badiou, and Ernesto Laclau among others.

CS456 Art and Postcolonial Theory

2 units / Semester I

Especially designed for students who can believe that there is no conflict in discussing aesthetic and social ideas, this critical theory course will study the development of post-colonial theory from its beginnings found in the writings of Fanon and Foucault to the most recent expressions of Said, Spivak and Bhabha. Through readings, slide presentations, lectures and class discussions we will consider postcolonialism as an alternative to critical strategies that are based in logocentric constructions of alterity, and which inform a split in our understanding of race on the one hand, and aesthetic judgments on the other. We will show how such strategies perpetuate age old binary oppositions that privilege insular theories of artistic production, and how postcolonialism, being a radical critique of culture, undermines such hierarchies by functioning as an ethics of radicalism in general, especially as it applies to art. Included in this investigation is a discussion of works of art and museum exhibitions that have attempted to demonstrate a fundamental paradox in the traditional conflation of 'good' art with universal values. These exhibitions attempted to rewrite our idea of history by implementing a postcolonial critical strategy which maps out an alternative historical view, an aesthetic and ethical landscape that is not bifurcated by racial difference, a critical space where notions of identity politics are not clearly differentiated from aesthetic radicalism. This course will consider that invention in art is not only part of modernism and its interest in transcendental judgments, but essential to both postmodernism and postcolonialism

Special Topics in Cultural Studies

CSCS501 Codes of Modern Capitalism: Seduction, Technology, Debt, Terror

2 units / Semester II

Capital, then Capitalism(s)-as assemblage, dispositif, system-appears to be mutating in provocative and challenging ways. How can these permutations, from disciplinary societies to control societies, from symbolic to semiotic, from subject/object to flows, be thought? What would be the continuities? the discontinuities? the acontinuities? What might be the contours of a possible shift from the 'Washington Consensus' to the 'Beijing Consensus,' or the 'G-20 Consensus?' Have we entered a time of hypercapitalism? How can the stunning surge of wealth concentration be explained? Next, what impact has the current 'regime of truth' had on art and aesthetics? Beginning with an examination of certain contemporary analyses of neoliberalism, the course will explore a number of crucial tropes, including terror, seduction, technology, debt; in addition, aspects of religion, race, gender, subjectivity, labor, globalism, and biocapitalism/bioart will be addressed. Finally, what would be some of the ways to begin thinking the current political and economic moment otherwise, and how might change in that mode be conceptualized?

- BFA 1s and 2s and 3s - Permission of Instructor Required.

CSCS552 Parallel Worlds: Fiction & Imaginary Futures, 1850-Present

2 units / Semester I

A workshop and discussion class on how to use tools broadly related to science fiction: parallel worlds, myopias, grotesquerie, steam punk, the boy as machine, engineering of memory and identity, electricity and the x-ray, etc. A journey through the 'misremembering of the future,' not only in science fiction, but also in 'utopian' literature, urban planning, caricature, animation, cinema, industrial design, entertainment; in architecture, in social movements, in painting, theater; digital media. From 1850 onward, the impulse to grasp an imaginary twentieth century was particularly fierce and complex. This contrasts oddly with our century. The culture of 'imaginary futures' has taken a very unusual turn since the collapse of post-modernism, essentially after 1989, more about a hollowing out of identity, about a horizontal mapping of globalization. Recommended for Integrated Media students. Recommended for Integrated Media students.

CSCS553 Remixing Jemima: Poetry and Contemporary Mythology

2 units / Semester I

Many artists have explored the power of myths, folklore and fairy tales to trouble or reinforce widely-held cultural beliefs and social assumptions. When it comes to African America, social myths (including stereotypes) have shaped our experience externally and internally. We will examine the work of a range of theorists, artists and hybrids inside and outside African American cultural groups and look at how belief and art intersect. Of particular interest will be Roland Barthes's assertion that myth happens when we replace the historical/political origin of a thing with a 'natural' one and an in-depth discussion of the 'Mammy' -type.

- BFA 1s and 2s and 3s - Permission of Instructor Required.

T 819 Objects High & Low: History Puppet

2 units / Semester I

This class will look at the rich and varied history of puppetry and object theater in the United States. The survey will include Native American ceremonial puppetry, vaudeville trick mari- onettes, WPA puppet plays, Vegas showgirl puppet acts, avant-garde experimentation and more. We will look at the form and content of these various uses of puppetry as well as the subcultures from which they sprang.

- Enrollment limited to 16 students.
- Open to the Institute. BFA-2 and above.
- Approved for Critical Studies credit in the Cultural Studies area.

Science and Math

CSSM213 Number, Numeral, Shape, Structure

2 units / Semester I

Numerals, the representation of numbers, were developed to help humans enumerate objects beyond what the human brain can perceive without counting. Each number system reflects a culture's history and primary use for numbers. Number systems can promote or inhibit the development of other areas of mathematics. Numbers such as zero, negatives, irrationals, complex numbers, the infinitely large and the infinitely small remained undiscovered for centuries because the numerals and methods used to manipulate numbers did not permit or require them. This course will look at different number systems and mathematical discoveries from across the globe and throughout history. We will look at different ways numerals were used and manipulated. Basic algebra and geometry will be explored and compared to illustrate the discovery of different types of number and different ways to handle dimensions beyond what we easily perceive. We will also look at how we use numbers to explain the past, describe the present and predict the future.

- Open to the Institute.

CSSM261 Environments for Intelligence

2 units / Semester I

The physics of the evolution of the cosmos. Is there life on other planets? Around other stars? Have any aliens visited Earth? What are UFOs? Will we ever meet intelligent aliens? This course will examine these questions systematically, and discuss the development of life on Earth, 'alien' intelligent species on Earth, whether there are signs of intelligent life on Earth, the scale of the Milky Way, whether and how we could visit other stars, the methods and strategies of the modern search for extraterrestrial intelligence, how students can participate in the search, the images of aliens in science fiction and what effect First Contact will have on human society. Along the way we will study the life cycles of stars and galaxies, the origin of the chemical elements and the possible origins of life in the universe. Occasional nighttime sky observing. Guest lecturers from NASA's SETI search team.

- Open to the Institute.

CSSM263 Science of Art and Life Safety

2 units / Semester II

The physics and chemistry of hazardous materials, safe operations and building design. Are artistic practices safe? Should safety affect your choice of equipment and studio materials, how you use them in your workplace (CalArts), or your artistic and ordinary lifestyles? This course will examine the use of hazardous materials in normal and extraordinary situations, in the wider contexts of environmental pollution, codes and regulations, risk assessment, principles of insurance, the physics of pollution and building design, and the biochemistry of poisons, nuclear power and other hazards. We will use CalArts artistic materials, shops, theaters and main building as case study examples. We will use the tools of science and math to gather data, make site visits, do experiments and look for opportunities for art to enhance safety at CalArts. HIV & AIDS will be covered. First Aid and CPR certificate will be required as part of the course.

- Open to the Institute.

CSSM264 Genetics: From Mendel to Monsanto

2 units / Semester II

For a relatively simple molecule, DNA has had an extraordinary impact on society. This course examines how DNA stores, uses and passes on information to the next generation. Once we have an elementary understanding of basic genetics, we will be able to consider current issues involving genetic technologies such as cloning, genetic engineering, and gene therapy. The second aspect of this course considers how the study of genetics has influenced how we view ourselves as humans. Are we the way we are because of our genes, or because of the environment? Can patterns written in our DNA reveal aspects of our prehistory? We will examine several case studies on the genetic basis of complex human behaviors and critically evaluate both the methods of analysis and interpretations of these studies.

CSSM265 Sex and Death: Biology From Beginning to End

2 units / Semester I

Biology is the scientific study of life. An individual's life begins through a process of reproduction. Reproduction may be either asexual or sexual, and in some species both may occur. Regardless of modality, successful reproduction is contingent on the individual's ancestors' ability to have survived long enough to reproduce. The differential survival of individuals may lead to evolution by natural selection, another hallmark of 'life'. In the case of sexual reproduction, an individual's immediate ancestors also had to find a mate and thus also had to beat the odds against a force called 'sexual selection'. Because of intrinsic trade-offs between the ability to survive and the ability to reproduce, death is inevitable and is thus perhaps also a hallmark of 'life'. This course is organized around the biology of life histories (patterns of reproduction and death). Perspectives from anatomy, behavior, ecology, evolution, developmental biology, genetics, neuroscience and physiology will be brought together to understand life. All life forms will be considered but there will be an emphasis on the biology of humans. Towards our more complete understanding of 'life' in the context of humans, we will conduct a class project on human reproductive behaviors and examine some technological advances for controlling our reproduction and lifespan.

CS361A&B The Anatomy of Movement

2 units / Semester I, II

CS361A (Fall semester)

An understanding of anatomy can build a compassionate and informed relationship with your own body. This course will provide students with a detailed knowledge of how the body moves and functions. The first semester will cover the lower body and abdomen. Students will become familiar with anatomical terminology, the skeletal system, and the function and actions of the major muscle groups of the body. The class will take an in-depth approach to understanding the relationship between muscle groups that results in physical activity. In the second half of the semester, students will be asked to apply their knowledge of anatomy to investigate the causes for postural imbalances, common injuries, and more.

- Critical Studies credit allowed for Dance Students.
- It is strongly recommended that this course be followed by CS361B which covers upper body.

CS361B (Spring semester)

An understanding of anatomy can build a compassionate and informed relationship with your own body. This course will provide students with a detailed knowledge of how the body moves and functions. The spring semester will cover the arms, back, and upper torso. Students will become familiar with anatomical terminology, the skeletal system, and the function and actions of the major muscle groups of the body. The class will take an in-depth approach to understanding the relationship between muscle groups that result in physical activity. In the second half of the semester, students will be asked to apply their knowledge of anatomy to investigate the causes for postural imbalances, common injuries, and more.

- Critical Studies credit allowed for Dance Students.
- It is strongly recommended that this course be followed by CS560B which covers upper body.
- Permission of instructor required.

CSSM364 Matter and Molecules: From the Eve of Atoms

3 units / Semester II

What is the physical universe made of? This course will address this vital question by first looking at the many different answers that have been proposed in the past (from the Alchemists of ancient world to the ideas from the early 20th century). We will look at the history of transmutation (the conversion of one element into another) and where this idea fits into our current understanding of the elements. We will explore how scientists were able to study, characterize and ultimately construct theories about things far too small to see (such as atoms, chemical bonds and molecules). Modern theories of the elements have moved beyond 'Air, Water, Earth and Fire' into an orderly and beautiful arrangement of over 100 elements. The current categorization of these elements describes and predicts chemical properties, but does this mean that we now understand the structure of the Universe? In addition to learning some basic chemistry, we will look at some of the personalities and some very important missteps that helped to ultimately bring about our current view of matter. This course has an important laboratory component that includes In-class demonstrations and experiments to help illustrate concepts and to help us to appreciate science as an active process and not just a collection of facts.

- Open to the Institute.

CSSM365 Green Science

2 units / Semester I

When we say some thing or practice or process is 'Green,' what do we mean? Can we believe Green labels? For example, what about LEED ratings for buildings? Energy Star ratings for appliances? Is there such a thing as a process with no waste? Why are renewable energy schemes tied to fossil fuels, and can they be untied? Is there a criterion for examining the sustainability of processes such as making ethanol biofuel from corn? What about impacts of such processes outside the energy market, such as on the food market? Is local food always better? Is there truth to the notion that Native Americans have always lived lightly upon the land? Why was Easter Island abandoned? What is our responsibility to current and future generations? Is there a sustainable future in the face of unlimited population growth? Can technology save us? Was Malthus right? Through examinations of historical and current case studies and topics and hands-on assignments, we will investigate these and related topics, to find our way to an idea of sustainability based on sound science and ethical behavior.

- Open to the Institute.

CSSM462 Human Body From Food to Function

2 units / Semester II

This course will begin with atoms, the building blocks of food, and will end with a complete human body. We will survey the basics of nutrition including carbohydrates, fats, proteins, vitamins, minerals and metabolism. With these concepts in mind, we will be able to see how the body puts our food to work. We will see how the body converts breakfast into muscles that can contract and brains that can think. We will see how vitamins help our eyes turn light into images, and how minerals help transport oxygen throughout our body in blood cells. We will see how the body can fight off bacteria but sometimes mistakes the food we eat for a hostile invader and learn why some fats are good and some fats are bad.

CSSM561 Introduction to Holography

2 units / Semester I, II

Step through the magical window into the world of holography. Students will learn how to produce artistically and technically interesting holograms viewable in white light. The course will begin with an introduction to a range of stereoscopic imaging techniques and their relation to human perception, the theory of the photographic process, to geometrical, wave and quantum optics, to the history of holography, and will examine a large range of images. There will be an end of semester exhibition of student work selected by the instructor. The lab space is very limited.

- Lab fee of $100.

TP212 Statical Engineering for the Theater

3 units / Semester I

See description in School of Theater section.

- Permission of instructor required.

TP406 Lighting Technology

2 units / Semester I

Lecture/demonstration leading to an in-depth understanding of energy and its transformation, the basic physics of electricity and light and the design and operation of systems for their control, the physiology of human perception of light and the interaction of colored light with colored surfaces. Electrical safety will be stressed.

- Receives Critical Studies credit in the Science and Math category.

Metier Studies

CS171A&B Historical Survey of Graphic Design

2 units / Semester I, II

Two semester sequence. This slide/lecture course covers the development of graphic design in the context of the social and cultural significance of other design movements, from the Industrial Revolution to the present. Class discussion based on the slides and assigned readings will focus on the meaning or significance of theory and practice, individual works, and the larger role of the designer in today's consumer culture.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS174A&B Dance and World Cultures

2 units / Semester I, II

This course examines the various roles that dance plays in human culture. Through video viewing, readings, writings and discussions, students will gain a critical perspective on dance within religious, social and theatrical contexts. Examples are drawn from American culture as well as from selected countries around the world to provide a greater appreciation for the creative diversity of human expressivity through dance. Dance and World Cultures is a year-long course, though students may register for each semester independently. The first semester establishes a theoretical framework for dance observation within a cross-cultural context and then proceeds to examine examples of dance within religious contexts. The second semester examines examples of social dance and dance as art and entertainment.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS175A Film History I - 1895-1950

3 units / Semester I

Film History I is a survey of the development of the cinema from its origins in the late 19th century through the onset of the Second World War. The course will emphasize the development of cinema aesthetics through the study of works by major filmmakers, from LumiÈre, MÈliÈs and Porter to Renoir, Ozu and Welles. Requirements include regular attendance, weekly readings, weekly short papers and a final research paper. Purchase of a course reader is mandatory.

- Permission of instructor required.
- May be repeated for credit.
- Contract required.

CS175B Film History II - 1950-2009

3 units / Semester II

A survey of the cinema from the end of the Second World War to the present. The course traces the impact of the Italian neo-realists upon the development of post-war aesthetics, following the movements that came in their wake, the filmmakers who carried on their legacy and those who rejected it. The story is framed through the study of works by major filmmakers, from Rossellini and DeSica to Godard and Varda, Ford and Hitchcock to Cassavetes and Burnett. Requirements include regular attendance, weekly readings, weekly short papers and a final research paper. Purchase of a course reader is mandatory.

- CS175A is not a prerequisite.
- Required of all PFV MFA-1 students (1 semester, either A or B) and incoming BFA students (year-long, A&B)
- Required of Experimental Animation BFA-2 students (year-long, A&B).
- Required of FDP MFA-1 students (year-long, A&B)
- May be repeated for credit.

CS178A Survey of World Theater - Activism

3 units / Semester I

Survey of World Theater - Text is designed to provide a survey of twentieth century theatre history with an emphasis on world theatre by studying the work of select playwrights. We will explore the plays/texts through a variety of assignments, including critical writing, creative projects and performance.

- One of four courses available to meet the Theater School metier studies requirement.
- For BFA-2 & BFA-3 students.

CS178B Survey of World Theater - Visual

3 units / Semester II

Engaging with the history of world theater through visual media (related art work of the period, evolutions in the history of design, visual communication as a means of analysis). There will be writing, but also response in other modes

CS179A Survey of World Theater Performance

3 units / Semester I

This course considers significant performance techniques within their political contexts. Histories of theater, performance art, spectacle, and the performance of everyday life frame an understanding of the performing body and its relationship to the real, to cultural identity, and to shifting visions of modernity. Readings provide examples from different national contexts, and include performance texts, artist's writings, and critical scholarship.

- One of four courses available to meet the Theater School mDtier studies requirement.
- Approved for Critical Studies credit.
- For BFA-2 and BFA-3 students.

CS179B World Theater - Arts Activism

3 units / Semester I

This survey course will explore the work of radical collectives, community artists, guerilla performers, and other modern and contemporary troublemakers and active agents whose artistic practices are fundamentally committed to social justice through the arts. We will investigate theoretical and historical references as they relate to public and context-based work within and outside of institutional environments. We will explore work as it pertains to the performance arts, visual arts, writing arts, community building/organizing and other practices that eloquently question/examine the dynamics between artists and their communities. This class will be modeled as a forum and active participation and engagement is expected. The class will culminate with a free day-long event/forum open to the larger (LA and SCV) community which will be shaped and designed by you and will include original performances, artwork and fiery dialog.

- One of four courses available to meet the Theater School metier studies requirement.

CS272 Prostitution in Film

3 units / Semester Not planned for this academic year

The course will view films and read texts that center on the prostitution, 'the world's oldest profession'. Prostitution has been a subject of singular fascination since biblical times—we will consider the construction of prostitution in a range of cinema, including mainstream work, alternative experimental fiction, as well as documentary films. Our investigation will necessarily intersect with question of the representation of sexuality, and exploitation in a more global sense.

CS273A&B Modern Dance History

2 units / Semester I, II

This course will provide students with a unique opportunity to analyze dances from the 20th Century modern dance repertory. Within a broad historical perspective, modern dance artists will be examined. Through video viewing, readings, writings and discussion, students will gain a critical perspective on the aesthetic and philosophical contributions of the primary artists within this tradition. Attention to movement vocabulary, style and artistic interests and trends will provide perspective on the artistic landscape in which we as contemporary artists are working. This is a year-long course, though students may register for each semester independently. The fall semester focuses on the emergence of modern dance from ballet, through the 1940's. The spring semester begins with the primary choreographers of the 1950's and continues to the present.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS275 History of Experimental Film

3 units / Semester I

A survey of experimental a.k.a. avant garde film from the 1920's to the 1970's. Dominant traditions to be examined include: Dadaist and Surrealist cinema of the 1920's, Trance films and Psychodramas of the 1940's and 50's, the Mythopoetic cinema of the 1960's, and the Structuralists of the 1970's. Eroticism, narrativity, urban portrait, collage, and the impulse toward subjectivity and diary are additional themes forms and genres we will investigate

- Permission of instructor required.
- May be repeated for credit.

CS276 Animation Then and Now

3 units / Semester II

An international historical survey of animated films, from the early motion machines through the Golden Age of cartoons to the styles. Comparative screenings and discussions focus on aesthetic, practical issues such as parody and satire, timing and gag construction, stylization, and stereotype, and mythology and symbolism.

- Required of Experimental Animation BFA1, incoming BFAs and MFA1 students.

CS570D History of Video Art

2 units / Semester II

Video has a history quite different from that of film; with roots in gallery practice, performance, documentary activism and alternative TV, its radical roots continue to influence today's productions. In addition to screenings and discussion, we will examine key texts theorizing video practice. Students are expected to write 3 papers and will have an option to submit creative works as final projects.

- Open to both undergraduate and graduate students.
- Permission of instructor required.
- Open to the Institute.

CS570I Questions of Third Cinema - Cinema of the Global South

3 units / Semester I

The concept of 'Third Cinema,' coined in Latin America by filmmakers Fernando Solanas and Octavio Getino, implies a critical reappraisal of the national or cultural specificity, post-colonial identity, the dialectical connection between domination/subordination, centre/periphery and resistance/hegemony. While First Cinema is Hollywood, Second Cinema is Western 'auteur' cinema, Third Cinema is resolutely non-capitalist and non-Western. We will look at films from Africa, the Arab World, East India, Latin America, Taiwan...but also films that assert a cultural/political resistance within Western industrialized countries, such as African American cinema, the Black British workshops and the 'Beur' films in France.

- Assignment: one paper a week.
- Permission of instructor required.

CS570L Topics in Photographic History: The Photographic Book

2 units / Semester I

A strongly revisionist way to approach the history of photography is to bring photographic bookmaking to center stage. Books are vehicles for complex structures of sustained photographic meaning. In this sense, books can provide an antidote to a fragmentary, inattentive and fashion-driven photographic culture. We will consider the differences between series and sequences, the relation between image, text and graphic design, and the authorial roles played by photographer, editor, designer, and writer. Books considered will range from William Henry Fox Talbot's Pencil of Nature to Kurt Tucholsky's and John Heartfield's Deutschland, Deutschland Über Alles, August Sander's Antlitz der Zeit, Albert Renger Patzsch's Die Welt Ist Schön, Walker Evans' American Photographs, Bertolt Brecht's Kriegsfibel, Cas Oorthuy's Het Laatste Jaar, Roy DeCarava's and Langston Hughes' Sweet Flypaper of Life, Richard Avedon's and James Baldwin's Nothing Personal, Paolo Gasparini's Para Verte Mejor America Latina, Joseph Lelyveld's and Ernest Coles' House of Bondage, Larry Clark's Tulsa, Phillip Jones Griffiths' Vietnam Inc., Wendy Ewald's Magic Eyes, Michael Snow's Cover to Cover, Mike Mandel and Larry Sultan's Evidence, Sol Lewitt's Autobiography, Ed Ruscha's Real Estate Opportunities, Gerhard Richter's Atlas, Nan Goldin's Ballad of Sexual Dependency, and Miyako Ichiuchi's Yokosuka Story.

- Starts October 13th
- Permission of instructor required.

CS570N Cinema Against the Grain

2 units / Semester II

Now that the cinematic present is dominated by previews for video games and theme park rides, and the cinematic past threatens to congeal into AFI's greatest hits lists, it is particularly important to examine under-appreciated, even disreputable films that have gotten lost in the shuffle. "Cinema Against the Grain" presents (mostly) independent films in historical context and deals with the themes and formal strategies of works that have thus far been refused a secure place in the canon. Screenings include films directed by Oscar Michaux, Rowland Brown, James Bidgood, Fred Halsted, Doris Wishman and others. The requirements for the course are a paper per week, attendance at lectures and readings from photocopied articles and books on reserve.

Interdisciplinary StudiesID003 Interdisciplinary Student Project

1 unit / Semester II

The Office of the Provost will be accepting proposals for group interdisciplinary projects for the Spring 2011 semester. Students, in groups of 2-5, will propose projects of interdisciplinary dimension or concept. Each project will culminate in an exhibition/performance to be held on the final day of the semester. Each group will identify one mentor who will monitor the work process, the progress of the project as well as evaluate the end product and the individual student's contribution and growth. Projects will be accepted on a first come first served basis. Those students who have received interdisciplinary grants in the past may use this opportunity to extend the work already accomplished. Special arrangements can be made to begin projects during Interim with the permission of the Provost. An information session will be held in the Provost's Office in the fall. For the date and time please contact Nancy Uscher at nuscher@calarts.edu.

- Contract required.

ID370 The Peoples Theory

2 units / Semester I

An interdisciplinary reading and discussion group for art and music students. We will read articles with an aim to crack the codes of proprietary, critical languages in each discipline, to unearth mutual interests. In a critical setting which includes more than one discipline, how do we determine what is “good”? Who owns the codes? How do “specialists” in different disciplines come to talk to one another? Art students with an interest in music or sound are welcomed. Members of art bands are especially encouraged. Collaborations between artists and composers are hoped for.

- Permission of instructor required.

ID435 Wordrobe: The Intersection of Clothing and Typography

3 units / Semester I

In the 1970’s, the phrase ‘making a fashion statement’ became literal with the emergence of the message T-shirt. Once considered underwear, these walking billboards of self-expression became the rage of the 70’s. Wordrobe will look again at the intersection of clothing, words, and typographic expression in ways that seek to blur the boundaries between art, design, writing and theatre - removing the “costume” and typography from their traditional role. We’ll explore possibilities through project-based collaborations between students in Costume Design and Graphic Design.

ID517 Special Topics in Art & Politics: Women’s Culture—against marginalization

2 units / Semester II

From the re-reading and celebration of melodrama, “the woman’s film”, to the efforts of such groups as RAWA, which fights for the rights of Afghan women, we will research the ways in which women still face many challenges to achieving equality. Human trafficking is estimated at 14,500 to 17,500 individuals, most of them women, brought into the US per year. How is this possible? Students will select areas of research, which will contribute to events organized in conjunction with International Women’s Day, March 8. Students will be asked to complete two papers, plus a project of their own choice.

ID530 Toward Interdisciplinary Critique: A Survey of Methodologies

3 units / Not Planned for This Academic Year

A three-hour seminar, open to graduate students and upper-level undergraduate students by permission of instructors. Team-taught by Sara Roberts and Mona Heinze, in conjunction with 8 guests (5 from the Institute, 3 from outside CalArts). In some critiques there is a moderator; participants can say what they want as long as it is their turn. Other critiques stipulate the form of the contribution (it has to be phrased as a question) or circumscribe the content (name what you see without positives and negatives). There is critique that dispenses with words, using the body as the tool for communication; and there is the masked man who ridicules the work until the artist breaks down. There are as many critical modalities as kinds of fish. This class is not a critique, but a meta-critique, an exploration of forms, frameworks and ideas for the critical process. Each week, with a guest instructor, we will use a different critique. We will examine and critique the critical process, with the goal of a) fully engaging in critical conversation (whether as responder or creator), b) gaining a deeper understanding of how we function as critics—our values and prejudices, and c) developing a critical voice that is informed, expressive, and precise.

ID550 Arts Pedagogy: Artists Preparing to Teach in the Community

2 units / Semester I, II

This course is aimed at those students who wish to develop teaching skills within community contexts. The course will address topics such as the translation of content in specific artforms into culturally and gender inclusive curricula for adolescents, community and cultural issues, artistic, conceptual and social development of teens, learning styles, current pedagogical practice, collaboration, team teaching and ethical issues. There will be readings, discussions, guest speakers, panels, demonstrations and off-site observations. • Open to all MFA students. BFA students who are CAP teaching assistants are also eligible.

ID580 Independent Study: Arts in the World Coaching

1 unit / Semester I, II

This course is open to any current student in the institute who is interested in preparing for their career in arts after graduation. Each student will be assigned a mentor for guidance, but are able to meet with any of the mentors participating in the class. The student will work on an individually crafted plan to help them discover new and inventive ways to bridge the gap between college and their current career objectives. The students and mentors will meet several times during the semester to share their discoveries. Guests will be invited to the class to share their experiences and thoughts with the students about entering the workforce. The course may be taken multiple times. If a student repeats the course, they will have the opportunity to work with a different mentor.

- Open to the institute by permission of the instructor.
- Open to BFA 3’s and 4’s and graduate students.
- Enrollment is limited to 15 students.
- Does not count towards Critical Studies credit.
- Can be counted as a General Elective.

MFA Writing Program Core Classes

CS609 Break Every Rule: Conventions & Experiments in Fiction

3 units / Semester I

Show, don’t tell. Avoid authorial intrusion. One character and one point of view per story. Don’t switch tenses. Stories must resolve. These, and many more, are the rules a writer must know well before breaking them. Therefore, in this class, we’ll: Review ‘the rules’ of writing fiction (both externally and internally policed), examine how we and others play by them, and interrogate the logic behind them. Then we’ll explore not only ways of breaking the rules, but also articulate why we must do so in our own writing, if we do so at all. Through discussion, close readings of international materials ranging from 1740 to near this present moment, writing exercises and workshop sessions, we’ll contribute to the ongoing discourse between conventional and experimental writing camps by casting a critical eye on the discord within it. How did the rules emerge, and do they govern experiments of form, or the experiments of thought? Is there a ‘right’ way to use art and artifice to approximate human experience and existence? How do we understand and/or interrogate the functions of character, time, dialogue, or the narrator in the stories we write? Perhaps our most difficult task here is to begin critically documenting, and, ideally, theorizing, our relationships and approaches to various elements and expectations of storytelling (as well as those writers presented in class), as this work is a crucial aspect of producing either conventional or experimental fiction with greater clarity, facility, intention and confidence.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS620 MFA Visiting Artist Series

2 units / Semester I, II

Selected artists and MFA Thesis presentations.
Required of all MFA Writing, Interschool & IM students.

CS621 Black Clock Intern

3 units / Semester I, II

Workshop in editing and producing a literary magazine.
Enrollment limited by special arrangement with the instructor.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS622 MFA Seminar in Narrative

3 units / Semester II

A workshop devoted to narrative in all forms and media: fiction, nonfiction, poetry, film/video, etc. Though our discussion will be guided primarily by student work, initial readings and exercises suggest ways of thinking about storytelling across genre and medium. Whether you work consistently in one form or have a hybrid practice, take this class if you would like to develop your narrative sensibility-as both a writer and a critic-in an interdisciplinary context.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS625 MFA Seminar in Experiments in Autobiography

3 units / Semester I

This class will be divided into a literature seminar in which we consider six works of recent American autobiography, and a workshop in which we discuss our own related experiments in the field. The reading will range widely in form and content, and will most likely include works such as Lucille Clifton's Good Woman: Poems and a Memoir, Samuel Delaney's The Motion of Light in Water: Sex and Science Fiction Writing in the East Village, David Wojnarowicz's Close to the Knives: A Memoir of Disintegration, Bruce Benderson's The Romanian: The Story of an Obsession, Yvonne Rainer's Feelings are Facts: A Life, and work by poets such as Anne Carson, Alice Notley, Jeff Clark, and Frank O'Hara. The aim of this class is to explore the far reaches of what writing 'from life' might mean; to this end, we will grapple, as both readers and writers, with the many provocative issues that attend the genre, including the problematics of memory, the nature of subjectivity, convention vs. innovation, the blurring of fact and fiction, the so-called autobiographical pact, the overlap of the personal and the political, and the performance of the private self in the public sphere.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS628 Textual Strategies: the Class That Must Be Obeyed

3 units / Semester I

This class functions as an introduction to both the writing program, and to a wide set of contemporary writing practices. Overseen by the Writing Program Chair, Christine Wertheim, the class features sessions lead by each of the MFA Writing Faculty. Topic covered include the history and theory of modern and contemporary literature: questions about what it means to be a writer, who is served by writing, and what it means to speak for someone else when aiming to be a responsible citizen in an expanded community: awareness of various non-Western approaches to language, narrative, poetics and innovation and the ability to acknowledge and problematize one's own privilege as writer and thinker regardless of race, ethnicity, class and gender: theories and practices of performativity, including storytelling, stand-up, auctioneering, sermonizing, confession, prayer, spells and gossip: ideas about how bodies and words intersect in texts: questions of accountability when dealing with non-fiction data: theories of translation in their broadest aspect--not just literal translation, but the 'anxiety of influence,' cultural transmission, and translation as analogy for the entire nexus of writing itself: the relations between sound, meaning and figures of speech, including the functions of rhythm, rhyme, assonance, consonance and alliteration, at the levels of letter, syllable, word, phrase, line, and sentence; aspects of narrative and narratology--the theory of narrative--plotting, temporality, character, voice, and style: the aesthetics, mechanics and philosophy of realism, etc. The class is required of ALL MFA Writing Students in the Fall of their first year of residence, including Interschool and IM students.

- Required of all MFA Writing, Interschool, and IM students.

CS630 Performance Theory and Practice

3 units / Semester II

This seminar will introduce students to the wide range of issues and practices that constitute the developing field of performance studies, particularly as they relate to writing. Through embodied exercises, conceptual scores, and applied theory, students will produce "performative texts" for the page. Those interested in writing texts to be performed are of course welcome, though this is not a playwriting class. We will investigate "performativity" as an analytic (as a way of reading culture), play (the "as-if" element of culture) and display, the relation between order and unpredictability, improvisational techniques and theory, movement notation, theories of spectacle and spectatorship, and various tropes of performance (e.g. masquerade, ventriloquism, exhibition, historical re-enactment). The course is intended to blur performance and analysis -- that is, to employ immediacy, mutation, interactivity, kinaesthetics, and reflexivity in our critical investigations, modes of research, and literary productions.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS634A MFA Workshop in the Novel

3 units / Semester I

Novel-in-progress workshop with a focus on clarity - maximizing the reader's understanding of what the work is attempting to express. Special attention paid to the rhythm of language as experienced through reading work aloud; the use of personal experience and history to inform the creation of fiction; exposure to writers working in similar voices and themes. Participants must be prepared to read their work aloud, to participate in group discussions around each others' work, and to keep critiques useful and kind. Though there will be dialogue regarding the use of personal experience in fiction, this is not a memoir class.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS637A MFAThesis Workshop

3 units / Semester I

Required of all 2nd year students in both semesters of their graduating year. The course is devoted to editing, critiquing, and completing the thesis project. The thesis defense and graduation review will be conducted at the conclusion of the course.

CS637B MFA Thesis Workshop

3 units / Semester I

Required of all 2nd year students in both semesters of their graduating year. The course is devoted to editing, critiquing, and completing the thesis project. The thesis defense and graduation review will be conducted at the conclusion of the course.

CS637C MFA Thesis Workshop

3 units / Semester I

Required of all 2nd year students in both semesters of their graduating year. The course is devoted to editing, critiquing, and completing the thesis project. The thesis defense and graduation review will be conducted at the conclusion of the course.

CS638 MFA Workshop in Non-Fiction

3 units / Semester I

In this seminar we will investigate and workshop all forms of literary non-fiction with emphasis on the critical essay, travel writing, journalism, and the curatorial essay. Experiments in and cross-fertilization of the above are encouraged. The very notion of non-fiction has been questioned as modernist conceptions of truth have given way to fiction and to deconstructionist experiments that challenge notions of voice, authority, identity, linearity, and coherence. In this light, the inclusion of first person narratives within critical texts is appropriate, though we will not be focusing on memoir or autobiography. We will investigate several seminal texts that mark shifts (and expansions) in the very definition of non-fiction and read each others' work in light of the possibilities and hazards such shifts suggest. While the seminar will focus on reading and responding to students' texts, outside readings include work by Peggy Phelan, Geoff Nicholson, Theresa Senft, Adam Phillips, and Dick Hebdige. Open to all MFAs in the Institute with permission of instructor.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS646 Short Story Workshop

3 units / Semester II

The course will focus on the writing of short stories ranging in length from a few hundred words to 75 page novellas. The primary focus will be on workshopping the student's work. We will explore the various forms of style within the form with readings from Gogol, Shirley Jackson, William Gass, Lydia Davis and many others.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS648 What's at Stake? Handling Dramatic Tension

3 units / Semester II

Tension is a major part of Fiction's enterprise. At the beginning of a story, we turn pages, watching as characters take shape and sound out, but soon we're waiting for something to happen, anything, and look closely for a sign of trouble or the possibility of change. Whether the sign is as overt as a car crash, as nuanced as a change of heart, or occurs so deep within a character's (or a text's) interior that we think 'nothing happens,' there is usually an energy shift, some kind of torque, sea change or disintegration that causes the narrative to move through actions and consequences towards some kind of ending. In this workshop, we'll ask the question 'what's at stake?' of individual works of short and long fiction, paying close attention to the diversity and complexity of responses such a query elicits. We will analyze uses of character development, dialogue, setting, pace and deep structuring (secondary characters and foils, subtexts and subplots, themes, tropes and symbolism), to identify techniques for sustaining tension and narrative interest. Through workshops of student writing, and close readings of works from authors such as Raymond Carver, Migdalia Cruz, Percival Everett, Aleksander Hemon, Harold Pinter, Robert Walser and Tiphonie Yanique, students will expand their awareness of various approaches to narrative arc, as well as develop the means to handle the specific demands their story's dramatic content may make on narrative conventions.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS650 The Art of the Book Length Poem

3 units / Semester II

This class will begin by taking a look at a few of the more famous 20th century long poems before turning its attention to several recent poetry collections that either attempt to convey a narrative or dilate on a particular theme, set of characters, or 'concept.' Questions we will likely consider: how and why so many contemporary poets are making use of the long poem or linked poems; problems of form, content, and research in a sustained project; the process of narrative elaboration in poetry as opposed to prose; the differences between poetry written in sequence, a book-length collection of related poems, and a 'long poem' proper. We will spend roughly half our time discussing the reading, and half workshopping student work.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS651 Real World, Real Poems: Documentary Strategies

3 units / Semester I

Writing and art-making are lenses through which we can instigate ourselves to perceive the world differently, and to configure a different world. What is possible when we engage concrete and often urgent real-world concerns as the central substance of our artistic practice? In this class, we will read texts by politically-activated writers who incorporate research and documentary materials into their work. We will consider a range of ethical, political and practical questions raised by research methods, reportage, quoting, citation and appropriation, in works that address complex and difficult narratives, from war and interpersonal violence to histories of place and language acquisition.

This class principally centers on developing, through writing, an understanding of our world and contexts. You will have the opportunity to continue working on writing projects you may have already begun; you will also be encouraged to write beyond the borders of how you're accustomed to thinking of your practice. We will use all the tools at our disposal—reading, writing, and conversation—to explore what we believe, and how we will enact, the possibilities for writing and poetics in our time. Readings will likely be selected from the following list: Ammiel Alcalay, Heimrad Baecker, Kamau Brathwaite, Julie Carr, Brenda Coultas, C.S. Giscombe, Judith Goldman, Mark Nowak, Craig Santos Perez, M. NourbeSe Philips, Claudia Rankine, Evelyn Reilly, Charles Reznikoff, Padcha Tuntha-Obas, Spring Ulmer, Anne Waldman, Shangxing Wang, Tyrone Williams, Rita Wong, and C.D. Wright.

- Permission of instructor required.

CS652 Literary Citizenship: Tiny Press Practices

3 units / Semester II

This course is a hands-on exploration of contemporary autonomous small- and micro-press practices as they relate to a poetics of community accountability. How might we participate in creating the literary and artistic world we wish to inhabit? What is our responsibility, as writers, readers and thinkers, to a larger literary-artistic culture? What kinds of communities are made possible through different kinds of cultural action and cultural work? We will consider zines, broadsides, little magazines and journals, micro-presses and small presses, reading series, cultural centers, and collaborative or cross-genre projects. We will consider tiny press projects as a whole, with an eye toward critical conversation that encompasses both the work presented and the form(s) and mode(s) of that presentation. Presses and projects to be studied will likely be selected from a broad range of active small and tiny presses, possibly including the following: Achiote Press, Atelos and Tuumba, Antennae, belladonna, Burning Deck, Corollary Press, Dusie Press, How 2, Jacket, The Journal of Aesthetics and Protest, Kenning Editions, Leroy Books and Leon Works, Mirage #4 (Period)ical Meritage Press, Octopus Books, The Pines, Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, Small Fires Press, Taxt Press, Tinfish, Try, and Ugly Duckling Press. Note: you may take this class whether or not you define yourself as a poet and whether or not what you write would traditionally be considered "poetry." Translators and artists who work primarily in non-literary forms are welcome. The reading list for this class will be significantly different from the Spring 2010 version, so please feel free to be a repeat offender!

CS653 The Detective Story

3 units / Semester II

The detective story as a genre is a relatively modern one and arguably distinctively American, often said to be invented by Edgar Allan Poe in the mid-19th century. The figure of the detective is very distinctive but also very primal: s/he both echoes the narrator himself, the structurer of the narrative, and also the reader, who is trying to accurately untangle the plot, which always arrives in the form of a mystery, something unknown. In this class we will first examine classic detective stories and novels to see how they are constructed, and secondly move on to postmodern detective narratives to see how they build upon the basic structure and elaborate and enlarge its devices, though often for different purposes. At the core of the class is a look at narrative itself, and to consider how the detective story offers a basic model for what all narrative proposes, to help us figure something out. All detective novels forge some kind of conspiratorial bond between the author or the narrator and the reader which is both more overt and subtle than conventional narratives. All of them channel suspicion, anxiety, curiosity, fear and psychological identifications (when they are successful) into a powerful mix. In this they present a powerful point of entry into thinking about the relation between the writer and the reader.

This course is a blend of workshop and seminar. The writing to evolve out of such a class might be a classic detective fiction, an experimental or postmodern one, or simply a narrative informed by the issues the detective story raises in terms of the relation of the narrator to the 'mystery' and to the reader. Requirements include a presentation and an original text of no less than 3,000 words.

CS654 Post-Everything: (Re)Constructions of Creative Practice

3 units / Semester II

In teaching his students to engage in an 'architecture of decency' in the rural south, architect Samuel Mockbee reminded them of W.E.B. DuBois' statement that the twentieth century would be haunted by the fact that Reconstruction was prematurely stopped. Instead of tearing down existing barns and shacks, Mockbee's students built through and around them, recycling and repurposing everything from hay bales to windshields, creating unexpected new structures for residents in the process. Using Mockbee's approach and DuBois' caution as a framework, this course explores the 'post-' condition, and focuses on how younger writers and artists discard or recycle the issues, rhetoric and ideologies of the previous century to make their work. Does being (or being expected to be) 'post-' amplify or diminish the significance of civil rights, identity, feminism, race, class, gender, colonialism or humanity? Does it affect how we create, or what we create? Should it? By (re)viewing recent cultural developments (from the Black Took Collective and Latina film collective FULANA to Sueyuen Juliette Lee's Corollary Press and Torkwase Dyson's eco-urban conceptual art) and previous arts and social movements, through close readings of 21st century writing by younger writers of all stripes, and using writing exercises, workshop sessions, art viewings and film screenings, students will interrogate the notion of 'post-' in order to make sense of what's led us to this cultural moment, and to create new work built from their fullest linguistic, political, aesthetic or cosmological possibility.

MA Aesthetics and Politics Program Core Classes

CS720 Aesthetics & Politics Lecture Series

3 units / Semester I, II

This will not be a conventional course but a semester-long lecture series consisting of three autonomous blocks of readings organized around a CalArts or REDCAT lecture delivered by a visiting speaker. In the Fall 2010 semester, the lecture series will host the following speakers: Eduardo Cadava (English and Comparative Literature, Princeton University), at CalArts in October; Catherine Malabou (Philosophy and Comparative Literature, Paris X-Nanterre/SUNY Buffalo), at REDCAT in November; and Bonnie Honig (Political Science, Northwestern University), at CalArts in December. Please consult the MA in Aesthetics and Politics website, the Lecture Series brochure, as well as the REDCAT calendar, for locations, dates, and times. As in previous years, the Lecture Series emphasizes three different fields of study: aesthetic and political theory, social and political critique, and political art. Students are required to attend both the lectures and the additional course meetings as well as a mini-conference titled 'Biopolitics, Biotechnics, and the Arts' organized on the occasion of Catherine Malabou's visit. The final requirement for the course is a 20-page paper about a topic related to the course readings.

- Required of MA Aesthetics & Politics Students
- One year course.

CS722 Contemporary Political Thought

3 units / Semester II

In his book Political Theology, Carl Schmitt famously stated that all modern political concepts are secularized theological concepts—due to both their historical development and their systematic structure. In disagreement with this notion, this course springs from the opposite intuition: that all modern democratic, political concepts are secular, aesthetic concepts—due to their shared historical development and their plural and intersubjective character. The seminar will thus outline the way in which contemporary political thought has intertwined with aesthetic and cultural theories, showing their potentially shared historical and/or ontological roots and foundations. The semester will be structured around the four twentieth and twenty-first century approaches that have most explicitly outlined this position—those of Hannah Arendt, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, Ernesto Laclau, and Jacques Rancière. In the first section of the course, we will engage the tensions between decisionist, deliberative, and phenomenological theories of action, and their implicit and explicit understanding of intersubjective co-perception, political speech, and aesthetic judgment—in short, Arendt's 'space of appearances.' The second section of the seminar will discuss the potential isomorphism of art and democratic politics, typical of Merleau-Ponty's common understanding of aesthetic expression, political action, speaking language, and his final, unfinished theorizing of the notion of 'flesh.' The third section will trace back to Laclau and Chantal Mouffe's early work a democratic and rhetorical turn to Marxist thought that has Laclau's most recent work at its center and continues to be contested by thinkers such as Žižek and Badiou. Finally, we will focus on Rancière's 'aesthetico-political' theory-in-the-making, a form of theorizing that is becoming terribly influential in the fields of aesthetics and politics.

CS723 Critical Discourse in the Arts

3 units / Semester I, II

In the current visually saturated world how do images function? In what ways do they create densely articulated assemblages with political and ontological impact? How has the post-structuralist critique of representation created new theoretical approaches, and in what ways can a critical reading of the visual be addressed and enhanced? These issues will provide the principle questions for the course, a template for interrogating the construction and interpretation of the image. Beginning with Theodor Adorno's aesthetic theory and his analysis of the culture industry, the course will then examine Gilles Deleuze's time-image and Jacques Rancière's subsequent critique of Deleuze. This will be followed by Elizabeth Grosz's analysis of Bergson, with an emphasis on his concept of the pure past and the image. Finally, the work of N. Katherine Hayles will be used to analyze the transition from the analogue to the digital and the implications for political, aesthetic, and ontological issues. The second element of the course will be to focus on the image in contemporary culture, principally through film, and to address the manner in which these images have political frisson: among the filmmakers addressed will be Oscar Micheaux, Stanley Kubrick, Wong Kar-Wai, Claire Denis, and Carlos Reygadas.

CS721 Contemporary Aesthetic Theory

3 units / Semester I

This course is a graduate level introduction to some key issues where language is analyzed in relation to aesthetic and philosophical problems. Special emphasis is devoted to art and its discursive treatments-involving such basics as power, representation, and truth. Language is said to be the primary medium of representation, communication, and signification or exchange; it is, today, rivaled by art, which is said to enrich sensory or aesthetic experience. There is a contest between discourse and art. This course will examine their relations and discuss critical models of the dominant Western thinking about language and art. Readings during the semester will include authors such as Tzvetan Todorov, Gerard Genette, Ludwig Wittgenstein, Martin Heidegger, Jacques Derrida, Juila Kristeva, Paul de Man, Gilles Deleuze, Felix Guattari, and Michel Foucault.

CS724 Thesis Workshop

3 units / Semester II

This seminar aims to guide students from pre-writing to writing; it intends to accompany them through the preparatory stages of the writing so as to prepare them for the actual writing of the thesis. Over the course of the seminar, students will discuss their thesis topics with their peers and generate (as well as workshop) the various documents that are considered essential to the pre-writing process: an abstract, a research bibliography, a table of contents, a chapter outline, and more. In addition, students will familiarize themselves with the Aesthetics and Politics program's thesis style guidelines. As the final assignment for the course, all course participants will be required to hand in a polished version of one of the chapters of the thesis. This version will be commented on by both the seminar instructor as well as the thesis' first reader and should launch students into the writing of the remaining chapters of the thesis. The seminar will include a visit by Critical Studies research librarian Brena Smith, who will help students generate a research bibliography, and who will explain the library's guidelines for the final thesis deposit, which is required in order for students to be awarded the MA degree.

CSCW426 Performance for Writing

2 units / Semester II

CalArts offers courses in writing for performance. This course takes another approach: how does one make the writing perform itself, or, through dictate its performance through its typographic appearance? We will study a range of works—from Kamau Braithwaite's Trenchtown Rock to Schwitters' score for his 'Sonnatta in Urlauten'; from Kearney's libretto for the hyperopera 'Sucktion' to Deborah Richards' closet-opera, 'The Halle Berry One Two'; from wildstyles to Massin's design for Ionesco's The Bald Soprano and others. We will explore digital possibilities as well.

- Permission of instructor required.

CSCW521 Memory, Media and the City

2 units / Semester II

After five weeks studying memory theory and its relationship to literature and cinema, students develop their own stories, or film scripts, essays, plays, installations where the subtleties of memory (and forgetting) are essential. For example, we will study techniques for 'unreliable narrators,' or how the ambient, expressionist setting is developed, various tricks for interviewing, researching, cannibalizing from the newspaper or from one's own diary entries, building drafts where the ironies of memory are essential.

- Open to all MFA, IM and BFA students by permission of instructor. nklein@calarts.edu
- Permission of instructor required.

CSSS441 Ahimsa: a Culture of Peace Nonviolence in the Modern World

2 units / Semester II

This seminar explores the theoretical underpinnings of an Ahimsa /nonviolence paradigm. Through several historical case studies we will examine how nonviolence offers an approach to peacemaking that has been used not only to counteract forms of social discrimination and political repression but also to resist foreign imperialism or occupation. Many, who battle oppression and injustice today, now recognize the enormous power of global media to coordinate activities, plan protests, and publicize often high quality information about their causes. We will analyze how Global media may play a central and unique role in enabling to achieve human rights and democracy, as nonviolent groups are seeking to displace arbitrary rule in nations such as Burma and Zimbabwe, struggling for self-determination in places such as Tibet, and organizing nonviolent action for human rights and democracy in Cuba, Iran and other countries. Such explorations hopefully will provide a new understanding of human history from a fresh perspective of transformation and change through nonviolent means. The study of some key twentieth century individuals such as Gandhi, Nehru, The Dalai Lama, Martin Luther King, Rosa Parks, Nelson Mandela, Charles Perkins, Cesar Chavez, Muhammad Ali, Mairead O'Riordan, and Betty Williams, Madres de Plaza de Mayo, Aung San Suu Kyi, Student Activists of Tiananmen Square, Vaclav Havel, Wangari Maathai, Vandana Shiva and Mohammad Yunus and many other contemporary leaders and activists, will stimulate our critical reflection about the relevance of nonviolence, global activism and global media in the contemporary context. Each student will identify a particular non-violent movement for social change and/or organization and provide to the class periodic reports and critical analyses on the activities of that movement or organization, applying the principles and lessons drawn from the course.

CSSS543 Sufi Literature, Mysticism, Music, Dance and the Self

2 units / Semester I

In this course we will examine why Sufis place so much emphasis on music, and Dance, commonly associated with the 'Whirling Dervishes' and the profoundly beautiful poetry of the great mystics like, Jallal-ud-din Rumi, Rabi'a, Junayd, Hallaj, Ibn al-'Arabī, al-Ghazzālī, Hafiz and Farid-ud-Din Attar. Our focus will be to understand how Sufi poetry and music are used to open the inner self to its own reality. How poetry and music can create an 'altered state of consciousness' and that some form of altered consciousness is needed to awaken an individual to the reality of who he or she 'really' is and what that self consists in. While paying particular attention to the roles played by the main masters of Sufis in Turkey, and Persia, we will also focus on the local traditions of Andalusia, Egypt, Iraq, South, and South East Asia. Themes include, tradition of love mysticism embodied by Rumi, the metaphysical formulations of Ibn al-Arabi, poetics and pilgrimage traditions, of Rabia, and the various meditative techniques of Sama and Dhikr in the final fulfillment in Annihilation of the self or fana.

CSSS546 Geographies of Violence: Women in Conflict Zones

2 units / Semester I

Drawing upon scholarship from political geography of violence, ethnic-nationalisms, feminism and identity this course attempts to map the contours of women in war zones, in refugee camps, and in regions engulfed in religious fundamentalism(s). The course will focus on women in various conflict zones from Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, and Bosnia, to Philippines, Rwanda/Congo, Burma, Sudan, Mexico, Guatemala and Somalia, where the rules of war are changing dramatically. Distinctions between battlefield and home, soldier and civilian, state security and domestic security are breaking down. In this course we will investigate what happens when the body, household, nation, state, and economy become sites at which violence is invoked against women. In particular, an analysis of this conflict will move us forward in our understanding of violence against women-how it is perpetrated, survived, and resisted. Our focus will be to examine women not only as pawns, and victims of rape and sexual violence but to also analyze how women may become mediators, peacemakers, justice-seekers, and human rights advocates in these areas. Topics will focus on questions around nationalism and gender relations, globalization and war, violence and women's rights, women's empowerment in war, gender and citizenship, women's honor and war. Each student will identify a particular 'conflict Zone' and provide to the class periodic reports and critical analyses on the activities of women's movement or organization in their chosen conflict zone, applying the principles and lessons drawn from the course.

CSCS552 Parallel Worlds: Fiction & Imaginary Futures, 1850-Present

2 units / Semester I

A workshop and discussion class on how to use tools broadly related to science fiction: parallel worlds, myopias, grotesquerie, steam punk, the boy as machine, engineering of memory and identity, electricity and the x-ray, etc. A journey through the 'misremembering of the future,' not only in science fiction, but also in 'utopian' literature, urban planning, caricature, animation, cinema, industrial design, entertainment; in architecture, in social movements, in painting, theater; digital media. From 1850 onward, the impulse to grasp an imaginary twentieth century was particularly fierce and complex. This contrasts oddly with our century. The culture of 'imaginary futures' has taken a very unusual turn since the collapse of post-modernism, essentially after 1989, more about a hollowing out of identity, about a horizontal mapping of globalization. CSCS553 Remixing Jemima: Poetry and Contemporary Mythology

2 units / Semester I

Many artists have explored the power of myths, folklore and fairy tales to trouble or reinforce widely-held cultural beliefs and social assumptions. When it comes to African America, social myths (including stereotypes) have shaped our experience externally and internally. We will examine the work of a range of theorists, artists and hybrids inside and outside African American cultural groups and look at how belief and art intersect. Of particular interest will be Roland Barthes's assertion that myth happens when we replace the historical/political origin of a thing with a 'natural' one and an in-depth discussion of the 'Mammy' -type.

CS576 The Tracking Shot in Kapo - Aesthetics and Politics in the Cinematic Representation of Death, War, Destruction and Sexual Violence

3 units / Semester I

Look however in Kapo, the shot where Emmanuelle Riva commits suicide by throwing herself on electric barbed wire: the man who decides at this moment to make a forward tracking shot to reframe the dead body carefully positioning the raised hand in the corner of the final framing this man is worthy of the most profound contempt.

This seminal text by Jacques Rivette marks a turning point in film theory and criticism, opening the door to a critical investigation on how the form of a film is producing as much discourse as its expressed content. The shot is at the center of any critical discourse on cinema. By returning to the basics of what a shot can do and cannot do, as well as the theoretical and ideological applications of the way it is composed and articulated within the frame, in relation to the off-screen space and the camera movements, we will investigate what it is at the heart of the production of meaning in modern cinema. Here we will take the notion of modernity in the wake of authors such as Jean-Luc Godard (for whom the history of cinema is divided into two: before and after concentration camps) and Gilles Deleuze (who locates the birth of cinematic modernity in post-war Europe). It becomes clear that a crucial combination took place (as noted by Paul Virilio) when the apparatus of cinema met with the apparatus of mass killing during WWII.
